UIC takes big bite from federal purse

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal spending deficit for the first quarter of the current fiscal year was $5.62 billion, Finance Minister John Crosbie said today.

This is 26 per cent higher than the $4.45-billion deficit recorded for the same three-month period in 1978.

Monthly spending figures released by the finance department show that spending by the end of June had reached $13.02 billion and revenues were $7.4 billion.

Corresponding statistics for the same period last year were $11.57 billion in expenditures and $7.12 billion in revenues.

— Unemployment insurance, $2.4 billion.

— Interest payments on the public debt, $2.1 billion.

— Old-age payments, $1.5 billion.

— Defence, $895 million.

— Equalization payments to the provinces, $783 million.

— Hospitalization payments, $610 million.

On the revenue side, 39 per cent, or $2.86 billion was personal income tax payments, 16 per cent, or $1.18 billion was corporation taxes, 28 per cent, or $2.1 billion was excise taxes and duties and the remainder was return on government investments, interest on bank deposits, postal revenue and other smaller items.

In his state-of-the-economy statement last month, Crosbie predicted the year-end government deficit would be $11.3 billion, down slightly from the $11.7 billion chalked up last year by the Liberal government.

Most spending during the first quarter of this fiscal year, which began April 1, was beyond the control of the Conservative government. Crosbie was not sworn in as finance minister until June 4.

He told reporters July 26 that he hopes to keep government spending within the $52.6-billion ceiling set by his Liberal predecessor Jean Chretien, but recent oil price increases would force him to chop some planned spending to meet this target.

While the summer's sharp increase in world oil prices has forced the government to channel more tax dollars into subsidies for eastern consumers, it has also allowed the government to collect more in corporate taxes than it had anticpated from western oil companies.

The net effect of these two influences, Crosbie said, was that his government was able to reduce the estimated year-end deficit to $11.3 billion, from the $12.9 billion in Chretien's November budget.

Glum forecast wrong: Begbie

TORONTO (CP) — Despite gloomy predictions for Canada's economic future in last week's Conference Board forecast, some economic forecasters are optimistic.

"I'm looking for a higher growth rate than the Conference Board's," said Carl Beigie, head of the C. D. Howe Research Institute of Montreal. "I think that so many of these forecasts based on models are pretty inaccurate and very often wrong."

The Conference Board said real economic growth will drop from this year's expected 3.3 per cent to 1.5 per cent in 1980.

"They base their projections too often on the latest quarter. For instance, I'm sure that the Conference Board overlooked the big drop in the jobless rate that has just been announced."

Beigie says the jobless figures which showed unemployment down to its lowest level in three years at 7.2 per cent of the labor force "shows an underlying strength in the Canadian economy" that many forecasters have failed to take into account.

"If it weren't for the U.S. recession, 1980 would have shaped up to be an excellent year for Canada. However, I expect the slowdown in the U.S. economy to be over by the last quarter of this year and look for a strong upturn in both Canada and the U.S. by next spring."

Train station tears as Dief wends west

Times News Services

On railway platforms throughout the Ottawa Valley and into northern Ontario, groups of John Diefenbaker's fellow Canadians waved adieu Sunday as the former prime minister's funeral train passed by on its 3,000-kilometre journey to Saskatoon.

In the mining city of Sudbury, 450 kilometres northwest of Ottawa, more than 1,500 persons lined up at midnight to catch a glimpse of Diefenbaker's closed coffin.

During a five-minute whistle-stop at Chalk River, Ont., beginning at 7:45 p.m. EDT, 13-year-old Nancy Klock of Deep River bawled unashamedly amid a crowd of about 50 persons.

The journey began at 5:15 p.m. from Ottawa station following a state funeral for the former Progressive Conservative leader.

The train stopped today in Winnipeg and Tuesday is scheduled to stop at the Saskatchewan towns of Melville, Watrous, Chappel Junction and Prince Albert before arriving in Saskatoon.

The prairie politician will be buried Wednesday along the banks of the South Saskatchewan River.

The hearse that carried the former Progressive Conservative leader's body and more than 30 limousines had made a final trip through the rain-soaked streets of Ottawa to the station after an hour-long interfaith service at Christ Church Cathedral.

More than 1,200 invited dignitaries, government officials and Diefenbaker friends crowded into the Anglican church to hear the former prime minister eulogized as a man of integrity, honesty, honor and sensitivity by Rev. Ralph Cummings, minister of First Baptist Church here.

The service — attended by Governor-General Ed Schreyer, his wife, Lily, Prime Minister Joe Clark and his wife, Maureen McTeer, and Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau — followed a colorful procession from nearby Parliament Hill, where Diefenbaker's body had been lying in state since Friday.

More than 23,000 of Diefenbaker's fellow Canadians, a few weeping openly, had filed by the open coffin to pay their last respects.

In Toronto today, it was reported that Diefenbaker had a secret trust fund from the Progressive Conservative party of about $500,000 which is disbursed in his will.

The Toronto Star said the fund was set up for Diefenbaker in 1963 for his retirement. He did not use any of it during his lifetime, but was concerned that the money might end up back in party coffers if he did not make provisions for it in his will.

The newspaper says he has willed one-third of the fund to a project in his home town of Prince Albert, Sask., one-third to the Diefenbaker museum in Saskatoon and one-third for the distribution of his books and writings to schoolchildren.

Beef price expected to jump

TORONTO (CP) — Beef bargains are over and prices could rise an average of five cents a pound next week, an industry spokesman says.

"It's normal to expect some price advance," said Charles Gracey, manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, in noting higher prices being paid to beef producers in Canada and the U.S.

He said wholesale prices paid to U.S. cattle raisers — the beef price trendsetters — had recovered to about $64 a hundredweight last week. The prices had fallen earlier to $59 from $72 a hundredweight. In Canada, the prices dropped to $70 from $85, but then rose to $76 a hundredweight.

And now! Attack of the monster snails

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Giant African snails are causing havoc in the Indian islands of Andaman and Nicobar, north of Indonesia.

The several million snails now on the islands are destroying fruit trees, vegetables and even coffee and rubber plantations. And the situation could worsen: A single snail can lay 1,000 eggs in its lifespan.

The snails were introduced into the islands during the Second World War, when the snail-eating Japanese occupied Andaman and Nicobar.

Various methods have been tried to exterminate the snails, all unsuccessful.

The local Agricultural Research Institute is investigating the possibility of exporting the snails — sending some of them back to Japan as a cash export.

"The French and the Germans love snail meat and so do the Japanese," says institute director T. R. Dutta.

Meanwhile, efforts to wipe out the giant snails continue. Snail-eating crabs have been used without much success.

A special breed of ducks is being brought into service.

Bottle sellers risking fines

Retailers caught selling banned 1.5-litre bottles of pop are risking heavy fines or jail, says federal Consumer Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence.

"If storekeepers are selling them with the knowledge that they have been banned, then we shouldn't have any mercy on them," Lawrence said Sunday. "The instructions (to consumer affairs inspectors) are that they are to be prosecuted."

By midday today, however, Bill White, regional manager of the department's product safety branch in B.C., had received no instructions from Ottawa to step up activities against offenders.

White said his branch has been working quietly with local bottlers, and two of the three main bottlers using the large bottles were asked to stop producing them prior to the ban becoming law.

White isn't certain yet how effective the recall has been.

Charges for selling the bottles, banned Friday, would be laid under the Hazardous Products Act and could result in a fine up to $1,000, six months in prison, or both.

The ban has resulted in a hasty search for safer packaging methods.

Coca-Cola Ltd. has developed a plastic ring that slips around its bottles and absorbs the shock so the bottle will not explode when tipped.

Cold war won by Israeli?

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israeli scientists have invented a machine which they say clears a common cold within one day.

But they admit they are not sure why the device, based on earlier theories of heat treatment, works.

Developed by Dr. Arnon Yurushalmi of the Weizman Institute of Science at Rehovot, the small machine is fed with distilled water and then delivers humid air to the patient's nostrils at a steady rate, maintaining a constant temperature of 44 degrees Celsius.

Dr. Dov Opher of the state-run Kaplan Hospital said Sunday he had treated hundreds of patients with a prototype machine and has found that one 30-minute treatment usually clears up a common cold within one day.

But he added that the cold virus was not killed and the reasons for the success of the treatment are not yet clear.

First refugee baby is 8 lb., 6 oz. Huy Van

Victoria's first Vietnamese refugee baby was born Saturday.

Neither of them speak English and Thi Lien was already pregnant. They had two children.

Members of the Sacred Heart Church sponsored their new life here.

They were part of a group of 34 refugees who came to Victoria during the spring months. All of them now have jobs and homes.

Like the others, Tha Phan found a job — at Wille Dodge Chrysler and the family found a home — at 106-535 Niagara.

Sponsor, John McGee said today he had his car car ready to take Mrs. Phan to the hospital since the first week of August.

On Saturday he drove her to the hospital at 6 a.m.

Mrs. McGee says Thi Lien is "just a wee doll of a woman" but at nine a.m., Saturday, she gave birth to a bouncing eight pound, six ounce boy.

The baby, Huy Van, is the first baby to be born in Victoria to Vietnamese refugees, who were forced to flee their country.

Both mother and child are reported doing well.

Israel rejects new U.S. plan

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — Israeli military planes attacked Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon today, one day after Israel rejected U.S. envoy Robert Strauss's proposals for pro-Palestinian changes in the basic United Nations resolution on Arab-Israeli relations.

The army said all planes returned safely from the raids against Palestinian guerrilla positions in Ras el-Ain, eight kilometres south of the Lebanese port of Tyre on the Mediterranean coast, and a camp in southern Lebanon about 32 kilometres north of the Israeli border.

Strauss presented his proposals to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat during a three-day trip to the two countries less than a week before the UN Security Council opens a full-dress debate on the Palestinian issue.

Senior U.S. officials denied reports that Strauss had ended up siding with Israel, but at the same time made it clear the envoy had become convinced during his whirlwind visit to Israel and Egypt that a U.S. move on the Palestinian question at the United Nations this week would be ill-timed.

Strauss was quoted as saying his efforts to sell Israel on a U.S. Resolution had been a "fool's errand."

Meanwhile, in the Christian-inhabited Achrafiyeh section of eastern Beirut today, a car loaded with explosives blew up, killing four occupants and three others, security officials in the Lebanese capital said. It was unclear why the car was loaded with explosives, but some officials said the incident might involve rivalries between Christian groups.

Elsewhere in strife-torn Lebanon, troops of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon clashed with Palestinian guerrillas Sunday and took nine prisoners, the UN reported.

Radio Israel reported that Strauss would invite Begin to a new summit conference with President Carter and Sadat to ease the controversy over Palestinian rights. But Carter, when asked about the report, poured cold water on the idea.

The U.S. is seeking a compromise so it will not have to veto a Kuwait resolution in the Security Council calling for creation of an independent Palestinian state.

There was no indication from either Strauss or Begin that they discussed the furore raging in the United States over the resignation of Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, after the Israelis leaked the information that he met with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In a television interview Sunday, Young charged that the "stubborn and intransigent government in Israel" is hampering U.S. efforts to redefine its PLO policy, and said Washington's current PLO policy was "ridiculous."

Pakistan regions shaken

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Earthquakes shook mountainous regions in Pakistan and along the border between the Soviet Union and Afghanistan today. There were no reports of damage or injuries.

Pakistan's Upper Atmospheric Research Station reported an earthquake of moderate intensity shook Peshawar, 160 kilometres northwest of Islamabad. Authorities said the quake was centred in the Hindukush mountain range and registered 5.6 on the Richter Scale.

Earlier, the Hagfors Observatory in Sweden recorded a strong earthquake measuring 6.7 on the Richter Scale and said it occurred in the region along the border between the Soviet Union and Afghanistan.

A quake which registered 6.1 on the Richter Scale was recorded from the same area on Aug. 14.

'Charlatan' Kurds lashed by Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini lashed out today at Kurdish leaders seeking autonomy in western Iran, branding them "charlatans" and "enemies of Islam" and calling for their arrests.

The emotional attack came a day after Khomeini banned the Kurdish Democratic Party and ordered a general mobilization following four days of fighting that claimed 400 lives.

Revolutionary firing squads executed 13 men in five cities during the past 24 hours, bringing to 460 the total number of executions since the islamic takeover in February.

Responding to Khomeini's condemnation of the KDP as the "devil's party," Moslem militants demonstrated in Tehran and other cities to demand the execution of Kurdish leaders.

Khomeini accused the Kurds of trying to commit "fratricide" on the eve of the opening meeting of the newly-elected constitutional assembly, the consultative body chosen to study Iran's proposed Islamic constitution.

The assembly opened in Tehran Sunday but was boycotted by the KDP, which Khomeini banned later the same day.

Charging that the Kurdish leaders were linked to "America and Zionism," Khomeini said the "enemies of Islam want to drag our Moslem nation to profanity. Don't listen and don't let your youth fall into the trap of these charlatans.

"KDP has been banned and, since it's the devil's party, the people of Kurdistan must perform their religious duty and prevent their youth from being members of this party."

He called on the Kurds to seize their leaders and hand them over to authorities of his Islamic regime.

The strife-torn Kurdish region of western Iran was reported calm today, but massed Iranian troops remained on special alert for a possible counterattack by Kurdish rebels, who were routed in a weekend battle on the Iraqi border.

Tensions were high Sunday after Khomeini issued his general mobilization call for the military, but there were no reports of new clashes.

However, the state-run PARS news agency reported 30 bus passengers travelling from the northwestern Azerbaijan region to Kurdistan in the south were seized as hostages Sunday. Their fate was unknown.

Sheikh Sadeq Khalkhali — the Islamic judge who reportedly sent several commando squads to Mexico in an attempt to have the former Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi killed — left for west Iran "to investigate the situation in Kurdistan."

Russian spacemen isolated

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts were reported placed in "strict medical isolation" after returning to earth in good shape Sunday from a record 175 days and 36 minutes in space.

"It's good to feel the earth beneath your feet again," said engineer Valery Ryumin, stamping his feet during an interview shortly after he and flight commander Vladimir Lyakhov landed about 340 kilometres southeast of the Soviet spaceport at Baikonur, in central Asia.

Doctors placed the cosmonauts in "strict medical isolation" at Baikonur, in Kazakhstan 2,560 kilometres southeast of Moscow, the military newspaper Red Star reported in a special edition today.

Red Star said the spacemen were in jovial moods when they emerged from their Soyuz 34 re-entry craft. They were met by representatives of the local Kazakh population, who presented them with loaves of bread in a traditional greeting.

On September 1, there will be a moderate increase in Hydro's rates for electricity and gas.

Nobody enjoys a rate increase. But we have kept this one down to less than half the current rate of inflation.

Hydro's first rate increase in 18 months becomes effective September 1st, 1979. For residential customers the average is 4% for electricity and for butane-air gas in Greater Victoria.

RESIDENTIAL ELECTRIC RATE (TWO-MONTH PERIOD)

	OLD RATE	NEW RATE	DIFFERENCE
BASIC CHARGE	$4.00	$4.50	UP 50¢
1ST 550 kWh PER kWh	4.5¢	4.5¢	NONE
ALL ADDITIONAL CONSUMPTION PER kWh	2.5¢	2.65¢	UP $\frac{15}{100}$ OF 1¢
MINIMUM CHARGE	$6.14	$4.50	DOWN $1.64

Customers with very low annual consumption will actually pay less under the new rate structure.

- Small apartment suite without either electric space heating or water heating—two-month consumption of 300 kilowatt-hours: 25¢ a month increase.
- House with electric water heating but without electric space heating—two-month consumption of 2,000 kWh: $1.34 a month increase.
- House with both electric space heating and water heating—two-month consumption of 6,000 kWh: $4.34 a month increase.

GAS RATE (TWO-MONTH PERIOD)

	OLD RATE	NEW RATE	DIFFERENCE
BASIC CHARGE	$8.00	$8.50	UP 50¢
1ST 100 THERMS PER THERM	60¢	62¢	UP 2¢
ALL ADDITIONAL CONSUMPTION PER THERM	42¢	43.65¢	UP 1.65¢

For Greater Victoria residential gas customers with gas space heating and average monthly consumption of 70 therms, the increase will be $1.58 per month.

General Service electric rates for commercial and industrial customers also will increase on September 1st.

Dripping Diana beats the odds

An aching but grinning Diana Nyad, 30, waded ashore at Juno Beach, Fla., here today to become the first person to swim the 100 kilometres from the Bahamas to Florida. It took her 27 hours and 41 minutes to complete the endurance test. Plagued by Portuguese Man-of-War stings during earlier swims, she coated herself with a special latex substance, while divers on surf boards attempted to clear jelly fish from her path. Meanwhile, in Dover, American teacher John Erikson, 24, plunged into the icy waters of the English Channel today on the final leg of his attempt to become the first person to swim the waterway three times non-stop. Another channel challenger was Alfred Northcliffe, a 49-year-old paraplegic from Folkestone, Eng., who managed to swim three hours before cramps forced him to give up Sunday. He is paralyzed from the waist down.

Aaren Simpson, 23-month-old daughter of football and film star O. J. Simpson, was reported in a coma after nearly drowning in a swimming pool, a spokesman for the San Francisco 49ers said in Los Angeles. The Simpsons were divorced earlier this year.

Watergate figure Egil "Bud" Krogh, 40, is on his way back to being a certified Washington state lawyer again. The board of governors of the Washington State Bar Association voted 8-2 in Seattle Saturday to recommend that the Washington State Supreme Court lift Krogh's disbarment. Krogh headed the so-called White House "plumbers" unit.

Britain's latest heart transplant patient — retired London builder Keith Castle, 52 — Sunday began a new life with the heart of a 21-year-old professional golfer Duncan Prestt, who was killed last week in a traffic mishap.

President Carter and his family are great readers, he revealed Sunday while cruising down the Mississippi on a riverboat. "I read in the bathroom, at the table when I'm eating, and late at night . . . I read at the table, Amy reads at the table, Rosalyn reads at the table," Carter said, adding that he had just finished Robert Ludlow's The Gemini Contenders and a gift from former British prime minister James Callaghan, Third World War. The president mightn't have enjoyed reading an interview with his controversial brother Billy Sunday by the West German news magazine Der Spiegel in which the younger Carter insisted he was the only normal member of the Carter clan.

"Look at me," said David Duke, 28, of Metairie, La., national director of Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, one of several KKK organizations claiming national membership. "I don't have manure on my boots, I don't have a wad of tobacco in my cheek and I don't weigh 300 pounds" said Saturday at a KKK rally in Columbus, Ga. Later, as a white teenaged couple strolled over to a KKK recruiting table and the boy began to sign up as a member of the white-supremacist group, the girl began to weep. "One of my best friends is black," she said. "I can't. I just can't." In opposition to the KKK resurgence in the U.S., representatives of religious and civil rights groups from across the country joined in Norfolk, Va., during the weekend to found The National Anti-Klan Network.

Virginia Snyder, a 65-year-old Seattle widow, said she was determined to stay warm this winter — even if she had to burn her house down one room at a time to do it. Last winter, fighting to keep up her mortgage payments and unable to afford fuel oil, Snyder ripped the boards off her living room walls and burned them. "All that sawing and prying warms me up, too," she said, but some of those worries are over now. The Seattle commercial development department and a local housing rehabilitation program obtained a $30,000 loan to rejuvenate her home and pay the back taxes.

And finally, a Houston man struck by a lightning bolt while mowing his lawn Sunday, who "lit up like a light bulb" but was not seriously injured, was named appropriately Leon Swiech!

Genocide verdicts

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia's pro-Vietnamese government reportedly found the ousted Pol Pot regime guilty of killing more than three million people and sentenced its two top leaders to death in absentia for their "genocidal crimes."

Ousted Premier Pol Pot and Deputy Premier Ieng Sary — believed to be in Cambodia — were ordered caught and executed.

Snared dictator casts 'spell' on informant

MADRID (Reuter) — Francisco Macias Nguema, who held Equatorial Guinea in an 11-year grip of terror, has been captured in the jungle — alone, unarmed and clutching a small suitcase.

But the ousted dictator, spotted by a peasant woman as he emerged from a roadside ditch near his native village, issued a last threat before he was captured Saturday by troops of the military council which overthrew him two weeks ago.

"You will come under my black magic powers," he was quoted by a Spanish newspaper correspondent as telling the woman in Malabo, capital of the West African country.

The correspondent for the Madrid paper Diario 16 said Macias was taken to the city of Bata for a military trial.

Macias, whose arrest was greeted with wild scenes of joy in Malabo, Spanish radio reported, is accused of forcing into exile one-third of the small republic's population (total population estimated in 1978 was about 325,000) and of killing 40,000 political detainees.

Heath's pen rakes yacht racing setup

Times News Services

LONDON — Drastic changes in the organization of ocean yacht racing were demanded today by former prime minister and veteran yachtsman Edward Heath in the wake of last week's storms which claimed 18 lives in the international Fastnet race.

The Royal Ocean Racing Club (RORC) and the British government are conducting separate investigations of the tragedy, which required a $1.3-million rescue effort and cost millions of dollars more in lost or damaged yachts.

The government inquiry will be carried out by the Royal Yachting Association and conducted by a retired Royal Navy officer, Lt.-Cmdr. Bill Anderson.

The government inquiry will deal with such matters as whether the RORC should limit the number of entries in races and minimum safety standards for the yachts.

Heath, 63, who safely skippered his boat Morning Cloud IV in the 970-kilometre race from Britain to Ireland and back, criticized almost everything without blaming anyone.

In a 2,000-word article in The Daily Telegraph, Heath insisted there must be such improvements as tighter organization of the race and safety requirements, improved briefings and relay of weather forecasts and a "complete re-think of the construction of life rafts."

Singh resigns

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian Prime Minister Charan Singh, 76, resigned today after only 24 days in power but was asked by President Sanjiva Reddy to continue in office as head of a caretaker administration.

Singh's decision to resign followed an announcement by former prime minister Indira Gandhi that her 80 Congress (I) party MPs would not support the government in a crucial vote of confidence in Parliament.

Money for downtown

One of the best ideas to come from Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm recently is his plan to encourage downtown redevelopment in B.C. communities.

Vander Zalm said over the weekend he is concerned that the ever-increasing growth of suburban shopping malls is badly hurting small businesses operating in downtown cores. His proposal is to introduce provincial legislation that would provide millions of dollars in aid to communities willing to undertake downtown redevelopments that would benefit smaller, local businesses instead of national or multi-national chains.

Vander Zalm said he is most concerned about smaller communities, but, as any member of the Capital Regional Board will tell him, the same problems are occurring in cities as large as Greater Victoria. One of the main reasons for the current battle between the region and Saanich is the region's insistence of protecting the downtown core from the proliferation of huge shopping centres in such suburbs as Saanich.

The region is trying to do that by making it as difficult as it can — preferably impossible — for anybody to build another major shopping centre in Saanich. How much better it would be, though, to achieve the same ends not by hindering the shopping centres but by helping the downtown core. That is what Vander Zalm's plan would do.

Regrettably, shopping malls now have some natural advantages against which it is difficult for downtowns to compete. The malls' ability to provide ample free parking and the usual presence of grocery stores or supermarkets in them are two of the most prominent. For downtowns to compete successfully for the shoppers' dollars — an essential element in maintaining a healthy city economy — may require some government aid.

The minister emphasized that any plans for redevelopment would have to meet provincial criteria before any aid would be granted. Fair enough. It would not be reasonable for the government to risk taxpayers' money on any schemes that didn't stand a fair chance of success.

Neither would it be reasonable for the money to be spent on any proposals that would end up creating windfall profits for developers or large corporations, and the legislation should be drafted so as to ensure that cannot happen.

The minister has several months in which to get appropriate legislation prepared. Many downtown businessmen and civic governments will be waiting impatiently for the details to be spelled out. It sounds like a good plan.

Should the parents pay?

It sounds like such a neat solution to the problems of juvenile vandalism: change the law so that parents could be forced to pay for the damage caused by their errant youngsters. During the past few years it has been embraced by a variety of politicians across the country; Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier is the latest to jump on the bandwagon.

The proposal will doubtless attract the attention of many in our community. It will be seen as a way to make parents "more responsible" for the behavior of their children — and as an easy way to assign the blame for whatever problems teenagers are causing in our municipalities. After all, the parents must be to blame — otherwise, why would we be making them pay for the damage?

Unfortunately, it just isn't that simple.

In a few cases the penalty would probably be effective — cases where otherwise well-behaved youngsters from stable homes go on a single wild spree. The parents would pay and would doubtless make sure there wasn't a second spree.

Sadly, however, in most cases the broken window or uprooted street sign is only a symptom of a more deep-seated problem. Many of our vandals are already wards of the government because of parental abuse or neglect or their own previous misbehavior. Many more are still officially living at home, but have long since passed out of the sphere of influence of their parents. Still others come from homes too poor to afford to pay for any damage.

In all these cases much more needs to be done than just the levying of a fine or sending of a damage bill to the parents. The worst problem with Couvelier's plan is that by appearing to provide a simple solution to vandalism, it would distract attention from the serious problems behind that vandalism, problems which need to be examined by the whole community working together.

Fun at the fair

The fall fairs will be rolling around very shortly, and you will be able to go and see all the beautiful exhibits — all the way from apples to turnips and flowers to birds. All the animals in first class shape will be competing against each other. You can spend a couple of hours looking at all the different animals before the competitions begin, but then please stay back. The fence and grandstands are there for your protection so please use them.

If you have ever witnessed a runaway horse, a terrified steer, you will want to see it only once, especially if you, or a member of your family happens to be the victim. They or you will not forget it for years, because the broken leg, splintered foot, crushed skull, or badly broken arm, perhaps a broken back or even someone killed instantly. It is not very pleasant.

Those young 4-H people can hold just so much weight and then the animals break loose — we could have the same show the Mexicans have when they turn the bulls loose in the streets and everyone runs for their lives. If you think the wasp sting is terrible, beware.

You can see what happens when a very small scared and frustrated bird eats the ribbon he has just won. Canaries can be frightened to death, yet lots of adults as well as children still reach out and touch the cage.

Why not just look and enjoy, or pretty soon wc could have no exhibitors to bring these pets for us all to see. Let's not spoil it for the years to come. I could tell you some very terrible things that have happened on the farm around animals, and I might add it all happened because they were suddenly frightened.

The Saanichton Fair is worth your every effort to go and see all the different things. Let's not get hurt, and let's have a good time.— Louise Wiltermouth, 1706 Sprucewood Place.

Spiteful article

I am a visitor from the United States and have been enjoying reading your paper each evening, until I read the scurrilous and disgusting article written by your London correspondent Katherine Whitehorn (All my own teeth, Aug. 9). This is an article written entirely through apparent spite, without the least trace of compassion for those people who are unfortunate enough to have grown old, our senior citizens. Perhaps the writer had encountered one of her indomitable elderly female relatives, someone whose aim in life is to "stand on her own two feet" and who resents being treated like a child, someone who is just anxious to help, even to "standing by the stove handing the salt."

I wonder if this correspondent ever looks forward to a day when inevitably she will be old. Let us hope she will be as active as so many oldsters of today, playing golf, skiing, ice skating and winning prizes at bridge. If not, and she feels the burden of years, I think she will not want to be "shaken or yelled at" but will want those younger than herself to respect her years, her failing strength and her courage in the face of bravely-born suffering, weakness and the loneliness of old age. — Marjorie Sweeney, Santa Rosa, Calif.

Ivory tower

Messrs. Hedley and Hoppe, in their interview with Times reporter, Derek Sidenius (Aug.7) , definitely demonstrated in professorial tradition, that they reside in an ivory tower which does not afford them a view of the real world when they correlate opposition to "The Boat People" with prejudice, negativism, and insecurity.

Canada's consumption is among the highest in the world on a per capita basis as our vast area and cold climate combine to create great need even if we abandon our profligate ways and put great emphasis on conservation. A larger population at this time will be nothing but a detriment, in contrast to the time when we were an agrarian nation and human labor was a significant factor.

After all, if a large population were an advantage then indeed we would all envy both India and China.

The government is taking about taking in 50,000 refugees, among whom there is a very high birth-rate because of their religion. Also, refugees, unlike ordinary immigrants, have the privilege of sponsoring many more family members under a special "unification of families" proviso.

I have not advocated that we ignore these people, but I do insist that there are more humane ways to help and that our own people should be the first recipients of humanity.

In some instances the refugees will occupy houses abandoned by our own people who were unable to keep up the payments because of unemployment and inflation. Some of our schools are now substandard because we have taken in too many aliens too quickly, and the medical horror stories are endless because of an already overburdened system.

I would not even want to see thousands of WASPS coming into the country at this time. However, it is a fact, not prejudice, that these people who do not speak the dialect of our own fine indigenous Chinese, and with their health problems of malaria, infectious hepatitis, intestinal parasites and TB, will add a load heavy enough to break the backs of Canadian taxpayers. Vietnam, once the "rice bowl" of Southeast Asia, became an importer of rice during the U.S. occupation so, of course, life must be arduous indeed as people contend with a ruined environment and economy, but it is reasonable to expect that the best people are remaining there to put the pieces back together.

The media tend to give the impression that those of us in opposition are in the minority. I have good reason to doubt that, and it is interesting to note that the bleeding hearts do a great deal of talking, but the amount of cold hard cash collected is not at all impressive. Whatever largesse we provide would be far more effective somewhere in Indoneaia and we would avoid making perhaps the gravest error in our short history. — Sydney Carroll, 4657 Amblewood Drive.

History book

The school districts of Golden Stream, Palestine, Steele Bridge and Woodside, Manitoba, are now more than 100 years old, and they are planning to publish a local history book.

The pioneers and their families who were such an important part of these districts are fast leaving the scene. Also old landmarks are dimming in memory.

It is hoped that this history will capture and recall forever the wonderful part these people played in our past. Information is sought on family histories from residents and former residents. Following publication of our book we plan to have a reunion in 1980.

For further information and brochure, please write the undersigned. — Mrs. J. H. Foxon, Woodside, Manitoba, R0H 1R0.

American roulette

People have become very blase about space affairs in the last decade but since the American version of Russian roulette, played last month with the 77-ton Skylab, was really quite exciting. The excellent illustration of its possible orbits given in your paper on July 6 showed that Skylab could easily have come down on the orbit which intersected: Burma, Vietnam, Borneo, Australia, New Zealand, Peru, Colombia, England, Belgium, eastern Europe, Russia, Afghanistan and finally over Bombay and the southern part of India.

These are mostly very highly-populated areas and Skylab with its long "footprint" would have caused untold damage. It was purely a matter of chance, or maybe of divine intervention, that it came down on the least important orbit — that over Canada and Western Australia!! — Roger G. Napier, 80 King George Terrace.

Disposing of waste

W.A. Drummond of Duncan in his letter, Tunnel Vision (Times, Aug. 11),is trying to perpetuate the myth "that no one has solved the problem of what to do about the disposition of radioactive wastes."

If Mr. Drummond and others who wish to update their knowledge would send £1 to H.M.S.O. for the report "Glasses and Ceramics for Immobilisation of Radio Active Wastes for disposal", or read in New Scientist, vol. 83, no. 1165, page 276, they will find out how Britain, France, Germany, India and USA are dealing with disposal of nuclear wastes. — Walter White, 302-1440 Beach Drive.

RICHARD GWYN

Final remembrances of Dief the Chief

SALVAGE, Bonavista Bay, Nfld. — When, in their kitchen where we gathered for afternoon tea, John and Annie Lane asked us, after we'd asked them about the fishing, what we thought of John Diefenbaker's death, I felt guilty I hadn't known earlier, because we listen to the radio so seldom here. Then I felt off-balanced because I was without files to refresh my memory of him or typewriter to record them.

Later, I realized that the circumstances fitted the context.

In this "bookend" province of confederation, Diefenbaker's aura of invicibility first cracked. In 1959, then at the peak of a political power unequalled in Canadian history, Diefenbaker was bested on the issue of revising Newfoundland's terms of union by Joey Smallwood and by former Liberal minister Jack Pickersgill, who now summers in Salvage.

Here as well, and in the eastern provinces, Quebec included, Diefenbaker recorded perhaps his most substantial political achievement.

Essential life

Little appreciated at the time, Diefenbaker's visionary projects such as the Agricultural and Rural Development Act (ARDA) and the Atlantic Provinces adjustment grants were the forerunner of Catalyst to Today's vast complex of equalization programs by which the nation's wealth is spread among its parts, confederation is stretched, truly, from sea to sea.

Here, lastly, by the ragged edge of the sea, life is essential. So was Diefenbaker.

This is how we will remember him, not as a particular prime minister who happened to do this well and that badly, but as an elemental personality, as vivid and unforgettable in his faults as in his virtues.

Once, he conquered the nation by force of personality alone. He lost the nation for the same reason rather than for conventional causes such as unemployment or the defection of cabinet ministers.

In the end, as time and sentiment softened the public's memory of his personality, he won back the nation's heart.

To meet him was to remember him forever, whether as a messianic man, as a hypnotic storyteller or as a self-deluded political outsider railing against the invisible "They."

A couple of personal remembrances, both of them equivocal, because that's the kind of memories he inspired.

In 1963, as a reporter in my 20s, I was aboard the Diefenbaker campaign train when Val Sears of the Toronto Star uttered his famous line:

"Gentlemen. There is work to be done, and governments to be overthrown." I laughed. I may have applauded. But certainly I felt as did many others, that Diefenbaker's overthrow was something which reporters, luckily, helped to bring about.

It seemed so unarguable then. Diefenbaker was tearing the country apart. He did not understand Quebec. He was ruining the economy, and had allowed our dollar to sink to 92½ cents.

He was an embarrassment to Canada, a political fossil exposed cruelly by the bright lights of a Camelot John Kennedy just lit in Washington.

Later, I felt guilty. Not because I had broken the code of professional objectivity — in the '60s, we all knew that impassioned commitment mattered far more than dessicated detachment — but because I had failed, a much more serious lapse this in a reporter, to listen.

In the winter of 1962-63, when his government collapsed, Diefenbaker tried to arouse the nation to a sense of its independence by refusing to accept nuclear warheads on Canadian soil.

Few listened, and certainly almost none among those who ought to have been his allies — the nationalists, intellectuals, the academics, the media-opinion makers.

We were too busy doing our self-defined public duty.

If, since, I've been slower to accept judgments which match my preconceptions, I owe part of that reportorial maturity to Diefenbaker.

Which isn't to say, since politics never is simple, that Canada still wasn't far better off with a pro-nuclear Lester Pearson.

Thereafter, biding his time for a moment that had past, Diefenbaker essentially made a fool of himself. By clinging to the office of leadership after his defeat, Diefenbaker ensured that his Conservative party could not win office itself for a decade and a half.

Yet, back in the press gallery in 1973, I realized that a new time had begun for Diefenbaker. He had become untouchable, an icon. An artifact of our history that everyone wanted to preserve and to cherish.

So, since reportorial objectivity always is bounded by the limits of the public's tolerance, I wrote a couple of gentle, Dief-the-Character columns and got back a couple of personal notes.

One, that I treasure, reprimanded me for writing that Kennedy had once called Diefenbaker "a son of a bitch" since in fact, "Kennedy used the term 'bastard' about those he did not like."

Then, early in 1976, Parliament debated and eventually abolished capital punishment.

Diefenbaker, a lifelong abolitionist, voted for the noose. He gave as his reasons that, with the Queen due to open the Montreal Olympics, the death penalty might be an "invitation to regicide."

His real reason, I guessed then and now, was the chance to undermine Conservative leader Joe Clark, an abolitionist even though most of his caucus were retentionists.

I guessed as well that Diefenbaker would have preferred that no Conservative again become prime minister in his lifetime.

This vindictiveness Diefenbaker demonstrated during the Commons debate. A young Conservative MP from Saskatoon, Ray Hnatyshyn, concluded that the noose was no deterrent, and with great political courage because few in Saskatoon were especially strong, decided to say so.

Flaw in the icon

Sure he made some horrendous mistakes, yet his visions possessed an elemental power. The Bill of Rights, "unhyphenated Canadianism," which brought one third of Canadians, Hnatyshyn among them, into the mainstream of Canadian life, the concept of equalization which has brought so many of the benefits of the centre out even to the periphery of Newfoundland.

But vindictive. The flaw in the icon that few, by the end, wanted to see. Vindictive towards his party's successors, Robert Stanfield and then Clark. Vindictive to Quebecers, such as his lieutenant Leon Balcer, who tried to tell him that some Canadians wanted to remain hyphenated.

Perhaps, though, vindictiveness is a necessary aspect of an elemental personality. As you can see, as I tried to write by the ragged edge of the sea, I am equivocal about my own equivocal memories of Diefenbaker.

All I know for certain is that I'll never forget him. Nor will anyone who met him. He'll be missed.

About death, obits and 'our splendid singularity'

By JOHN LEONARD
New York Times

I mean no disrespect, but wading through the reams of copy devoted to the death of Thurman Munson, the Yankee catcher, has left me tired and confused and angry. A gifted athlete is gone. The unqualified approval he wanted so much, so palpably, is at last his, only after he is no longer around to answer questions. The rest, the overkill of column inches, is either guilt — we are ashamed of ourselves for not having loved him enough while, inconveniently, he was still with us — or necrophilia.

Already, I've gone too far. Death is automatically a distortion, a kind of abstract grief hanging on a nowhere wall, over a hole in the head. Six weeks ago we flew from San Jose in northern California to Orange County in Southern California. We found on touching down that the name of the Orange County Airport had been changed to the John Wayne Airport and that the initials on the luggage stubs would henceforth be "D.U.K." The only tree that grows in Orange County, I explained to my children, is the Birch. But there was nothing funny about it. Everybody has a right to his or her heroes.

Nevertheless: I knew four of the people in the DC-10 that didn't make it from Chicago to Los Angeles on May 25. Although they were not close friends, the book community is a small one, and the annual convention of the American Booksellers Association was about to begin in Los Angeles, and so, for the first time in my life, I sat down to the grisly chore of reading a passenger fatality list, aware in advance that there would be some names I recognized.

The other night at dinner I learned that a writer whose work I care a lot about was also supposed to be on that same American Airlines flight. Because of a mixup in his schedule, he had to cancel at the last minute. A standby got his seat. Every tragedy has its anecdotes. And how sad, really, to be obliged to die in the middle of a catastrophe, subsumed in numbers, a footnote to an investigation into the structure of an airplane and the vagaries of routine maintenance. Where is our splendid singularity?

All the splendid singularity belongs to athletes, movie actors, rock stars and politicians.

About the time that Thurman Munson died, so did a friend of mine, of another attack of the heart. Far more important than his friendship with me, which consisted of lunches and cocktail parties and telephone calls and wisdom, was his friendship with culture. Henry Robbins was an editor of books. Among the books he edited were books written by the likes of John Irving, Joan Didion, Walker Percy, Wilfrid Sheed, Donald Barthelme, Doris Grumbach, Tom Wolfe and John Gregory Dunne. The last time we had lunch, he handed me, in a brown paper wrapper, a fresh copy of Metropolitan Lives by Fran Lebowitz. "You'll like this," he said. I did. I am obedient.

Who knows what an editor does? There are the grabbers and the packagers and the promoters and the thieves. There are also those, like the late David Segal and the late Henry Robbins, who know how to enter a writer's silence and ask questions. They are perfect readers. In search of the perfect book, they nudge, blink, wheedle, sigh, expound, and publish you anyway. You know that they know that you could have done better, and so you try again.

Those of us in the agreeable racket of book-reviewing must sort out early on the packagers from the perfect readers. We all belong to the same service class of literature. We are middlemen, vendors of the ideas of other, more talented people. We agree to believe that publishing is the last honorable form of commerce. This leap of faith sprains the mind: If publishing were what we want to believe it is, literary agents would not be necessary.

But Henry, anonymous Henry, was unacquainted with the cheap. And what he did with his life was more important than any pennant, any movie, any noise. He civilized, by publishing books that will sneak into our unsuspecting heads and rearrange the neurons, the hierarchies, the values. When he died, The Times didn't write an editorial, The Post didn't run a series, The News didn't interview his colleagues, the wire services weren't around for the memorial service, 50,000 people didn't roar at his image on a scoreboard at a stadium, nobody named an airport after him. In France, where they care about literature, they would have named a street. Part of the honor of my particular service class just plunged into the abyss. Why is it that the wrong heart is always attacked?

Prosperity in the south could end Irish division

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

Machine that cuts and stacks moss sods for drying typifies Ireland's new industrial wealth

Bismarck proposed a characteristically blunt solution for the vexing problem of the Irish: let them trade places with the Dutch. The Dutch would then turn Ireland into a verdant garden; the Irish would forget to mend the dikes and drown.

One hundred years on, and the six counties of Northern Ireland — Ulster — are no nearer to an answer for a problem that has plagued the place over four centuries. Ulster is still a community at war with itself, still divided between two tribes labelled Protestant and Catholic.

The British gave up the 26 overwhelmingly Catholic counties to the south a half-century ago. Now London has exhausted its limited stock of ideas for the north, still attached to the sometimes United Kingdom.

London's last best scheme, a local government sharing power between representatives of the half-million Catholics and million Protestants, collapsed five years ago. Protestant workers brought it down with a strike, and they still impose a veto over any change in a status quo that preserves their near-monopoly of the best jobs going in the dismal place. Protestant workers have the keenest vested interest in things as they are; they will not be moved, without cause.

Many of those who know little of the place cling to the romantic belief that things will be solved if only the British pull out the 10,000 to 15,000 troops who police Ulster with a heavy hand. This is also the objective of the Irish Republican Army, the IRA, whose endless capacity to recruit gunmen and bombers from alienated Catholic youths surprises only the equally innocent British Army, press and politicians.

But withdrawal as an answer is regarded as mischievous nonsense by the vast majority of Catholics, more realistic than myth allows, in both the north and south.

They know that a pullout would only strengthen the status quo, reinforcing the Protestant ascendancy in which Protestant workers enjoy so keen a stake. Ulster's Catholics would either yield or get out.

The latter course would virtually ensure creation of a nasty, brutish, all-Protestant state, bristling behind the armed borders of perhaps four and a half counties. It would likely spur the creation of an equally nasty, militarist state in an enlarged south, the "malign solution" of Conor Cruise O'Brien.

Almost unnoticed, however, this bleak tableau has been broken. A glimmer of a twinkle of a shadow of hope has emerged. It is now possible for the first time to conceive of a way out of the dilemma, a route paved by economic circumstances and not by the blueprints of politicians, gunmen or romantics.

The way out lies in the astonishing burst of economic activity in the south, in the Dublin Republic. There, a wave of prosperity is bringing industrial plants and more to the soft, green countryside, a phenomenon noticed and exploited by U.S.-based multinational companies, which are profiting handsomely from it.

The simple fact is that the Republic has been the growth star of the Common Market for the last two years and is virtually certain to repeat that performance this year.

Over three years — the last two and 1979 as a forecast — Irish production of goods and services will have increased at a yearly rate of 5.5 per cent. This is twice the level for the other eight, advanced Common Market members. It would be well above the 3.2 per cent pace for West Germany, the No. 2 state.

At the same time, Northern Ireland, like New England tied to manufactures best made in the Third World — shipbuilding, textile machinery and others — is stagnating. Once the Protestant-controlled north could look down on its poorer country cousins in the south. Those days are over. Sometime this year or next, income per head in the south probably will pass that in the north.

Economics rarely figure in the songs, symbols and slogans that inflame Irish patriots from both sides of the sectarian divide and their co-tribalists across the waters. But jobs matter. Ulster's Protestant workers can't yield to the minimum demand of Ulster's Catholics, equal rights. Equality would threaten the Protestant workers' virtual monopoly of the better jobs in shipbuilding, machine tools, the police, civil service and more.

To be sure, the Ulster problem is greater than economics. There are deeply rooted prejudices and hatreds, endlessly inflamed by the latest atrocity. The Protestants regard Catholics as lazy, incontinent, dirty, welfare loafers. Catholics see Protestants as cold, merciless, mercenary. But this is the penumbra. The core is jobs, Protestant jobs. That is why the border and the Protestant ascendancy must be maintained.

But if Irish prosperity continues — and there is reason to think it could — then the reason for border and ascendancy will gradually disappear.

The sources of development in the Republic are easy to identify, at least after the fact. They lie in relatively cheap land and labor by European standards, tariff-free entry to the Common Market's affluent consumers, massive subsidies to draw foreign industry to profit from this market and the Rube Goldberg arrangements designed by Brussels to make rich farmers richer.

Traditionally impoverished Irish farmers are no longer so. They collect nearly $500 million a year from Brussels and are assured a floor under their prices with markets for their produce among the richer eight Common Market members. To be sure, Irish farming began to lift off six years before market entry, as early as 1967 (reaching levels topped only by Bismarck's Dutch). Now this sector can look forward to more and increasing amounts of the same.

Industrial growth is even more impressive — except to ecologists, the unthinking left and lace-curtain North Americans who now must turn to Central America for maids. Industrial output in the south has risen 2.5 times as fast as in the north over the last 20 years. Manufacturing jobs in the Republic have risen by 30,000 while 47,000 disappeared in Ulster.

The pickings in the south are very good indeed, just as they were in the U.S. south 20 years ago. Dublin uses the incentive techniques of the U.S. southern states to draw the plants. Export profits (and virtually all manufacture by foreigners is for export to the Common Market) go untaxed until 1981 and get a bargain rate thereafter. Plants, land and the training of farm workers for assembly lines is financed to a large extent by Irish taxpayers. A large and mostly literate labor force (although a very fractious one) helps enormously.

Well-off tourists of Irish extraction may deplore the despoilation of the countryside. But that does not impress the former farm worker who made less than $50 a week and now earns $200 mixing chemicals.

If growth continues, the Republic is likely to reduce its high unemployment — close to the Ulster rate and just under 10 per cent — and even run short of labor. As jobs grow scarcer in the north, there will be a move south. First Catholics, then Protestants will give up their grim rowhouse ghettoes for the better life. As hard-headed Protestants sometimes say, "Our loyalty is to the half-crown, not the Crown."

There is no reason to believe that even hard-headed Protestants would yield what remains of their sentimental links to Britain, to the Union Jack that many workers in the shipyard place at their workbenches. Sensible Catholic politicians understand this. Already, Garret Fitzgerald, the imaginative leader of the Republic's opposition party, has proposed a confederal arrangement to give all Irishmen citizenship rights in a triple sovereignty — Ireland, Ulster and Britain. The Dublin premier, shrewd Jack Lynch, has given this notion his typically Delphic blessing.

Industrial prosperity would undermine the myths. Industry and rationalizaton mean secularization all over the globe, and the easily available imported contraceptives in Dublin show the Irish are no exception. So the customs that Ulster Protestants find so repugnant — no divorce, no sale of contraceptives, education by church — are likely to dissolve.

Prosperity could, over time, dissolve the border's reason for being and attenuate stereotypes that give it legitimacy. Alsace-Lorraine and Kashmir once seemed hopeless problems, too. Time and other concerns turn attention elsewhere.

Crossword madness and perversity

WILLIAM GUTTMANN
London Observer

(Guttmann is a British newsman who spoke only 'schoolboy' English when he arrived in Britain in 1943 as a refugee from Nani Germany. He says one of the most useful tools for improving his knowledge of language was The Times of London crossword puzzle)

When Britain's Times newspaper suspended publication last November in an industrial dispute, it published in its last issue not only the usual crossword puzzle but also — a case without precedent — its solution, and thus paid a tribute to its most faithful readers, the regular crossword solvers.

It was an acknowledgement that, if The Times is a symbol of England and part and parcel of its culture, so is The Times crossword puzzle. Indeed the art of solving its presupposes an intimate understanding of both the English character and civilization.

To tackle it one has to be familiar not only with English history, literature and folklore, but also with the peculiarities of the English language, its richness of homonyms and synonyms and the immense opportunities offered for playing with words.

For the foreigner there are few better ways to penetrate those mysteries, provided he is prepared for hours of hard mental labor.

The uninitiated, whether English be his mother tongue or not, can be forgiven if, confronted with a crossword for the first time, he is both baffled and irritated.

What can he make of such clues as "Doctor deterrent", "Spilt soup is work" or "Extreme member turns in fat dancer's garb"?

Well, for the first example he must know and remember the saying, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away," which easily leads to the solution, "apple".

For the second the "spilt" in the clue indicates an anagram, and the solution is indeed an anagram of soup — "opus", meaning work.

In the third, the "extreme member" is TOE, which turns, i.e. is reversed as EOT in "fat", which does not refer to dancer but is LARD, so that L EOT ARD is a dancer's garb.

It seems maddening, but there is some system in this madness. In a little paperback (the second edition of which was recently published), How to do Crosswords Better by May Abbott (Collins), the author explains systematically, almost scientifically, the rules and traditions which the compiler of a crossword follows and which the solver must grasp to achieve success.

The above examples illustrate a few of these rules: always, as in the case of the apple, think of any possible allusion — historical, literary and so on; remember, as in the case of the leotard, "the guiding principle of the crossword is verbal plastic surgery — tearing words to pieces and putting the bits together again."

And look out for signals or codes: "spilt", for instance, just as "otherwise" or "arranged", signals an anagram, and "turns" means "read backwards".

Codes and conventions, reflecting the English partiality for all things secret, for cryptography and games, are an essential ingredient of the puzzle: thus "love", stemming from the tennis scoring term for zero, may stand for the letter O.

The Roman numerals for 1,000, 500, 100 and 50 represent letters M, D, C and L. But you have to be careful; the wicked compiler may use MD as a code for doctor and you may come up against the perverse clue, "A French town holds a doctor and becomes a London borough": CAEN, holding in its middle MD, is indeed CAMDEN, a London borough.

But the letter L may not only be the answer to the clue "Fifty"; but also L for Learner (the symbol for the driving pupil) or L for pound sterling ("£"). Thus the clue, "They hope to gain by investing a couple of pounds in public transport", has the solution BULLS — speculators who put two £s in a BUS.

The variety of these teasers is immense, so the puzzle is a constant battle of wits between the solver and the compiler, a love-hate relationship. There was the story about a solver annoyed by a compiler regularly using somewhat lazily the clue "Pluto" or "Hades" for the word-component "Dis" ("Dis" is an obscure synonym for "Pluto" and is, of course, very handy for processing words from discotheque to disaster).

In stating his case to the editor, he gave vent to his anger by putting it in a clue of his own making: "Pluto and young lady advise how you should deal with indolent crossword compiler." The solution was, naturally, "dismiss".

Museum Train on display

The Museum Train — the major travelling exhibit of the provincial museum — will be on display for the next three days at the Canadian National Railway yards, on the Victoria West side of the Point Ellice bridge.

The train, which has been touring the province since June 29, is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

It features artifacts, models, and photographs of all major uses of steam in transportation, industry and cities.

The two locomotives, No. 3716 — The Port Coquitlam — formerly a CP Rail freight train and MacMillan Bloedel's No.1077 — the Herb Hawkins — are also feature attractions.

The train includes a water car on loan from B.C. Rail, an extra oil car on lease from Canadian General Transit Co. Ltd., boxcars and flatcars.

The two men mainly responsible for planning the historical exhibits are Robert D. Turner, and David N. Parker, of Victoria, assistant curators of Modern History.

Oil firm drivers accept offers

VANCOUVER (CP) — A delivery truck drivers strike that officials feared would result in gasoline shortages for drivers and reductions in British Columbia's Ferry Corp. services ended on the weekend when workers at two oil companies voted to accept a contract offer.

Workers at Gulf Canada and Chevron Canada voted to accept different offers from each of their companies. The 110 Gulf drivers, members of Teamsters Local 213 voted 95 per cent in favor of the $1.91-an-hour wage increase in a 24-month contract.

About 25 drivers at Chevron narrowly accepted a wage increase of $1.74 an hour over 23 months. Union negotiators had recommended Chevron drivers reject the offer.

Drivers for Imperial Oil returned to work Friday after accepting a $1.87-an-hour wage boost over 25 months earlier in the week. A driver's wage there will rise to $10.59 an hour by Jan. 1, 1980.

A union spokesman said picket lines have been removed from Gulf operations, but adds drivers won't return to work until several minor issues have been resolved.

Endako carries on despite picket lines

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Secondary picketing by striking employees at the Endako mine is a nuisance but not a major problem, Bill Thompson, a spokesman for Placer Development which operators the mine, said Sunday.

He made the comment after rail services and a truck rental company were picketed by workers from the molybdenum mine last week.

About 480 workers, members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, have been on strike at the mine near this community since Feb. 14.

Last week, Hertz Canada stopped renting trucks to Placer to ship molybdenum from the mine after union members set up pickets at Hertz's rental centre in the Vancouver suburb of Burnaby.

However, Thompson, said the company is not concerned because there are plenty of trucks available elsewhere. Earlier in the strike trucks shipping the ore used in the manufacture of steel were pelted with rocks and shot at.

Thompson also said a decision by B.C. Rail not to move ore on a spur line from Placer's Gibraltar mine near Williams Lake because of secondary pickets is causing little concern because the ore can be stockpiled.

Union spokesman Bob Green said the union will continue secondary picketing in an attempts to pressure Placer into settling the bitter contract dispute.

Last month, a provincial mediator proposed wage and fringe benefit increases totalling 24 per cent in the first year of a two-year contract, and nine per cent in the second year.

How about crow bars for this crooked bird?

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — If you plan on taking a flight to Prince George, keep a close eye on your personal possessions while at that city's airport.

A crow that was trained a few weeks ago by crews working a forests ministry air tanker has turned to a life of crime.

Passengers have complained of losing keys after leaving them on luggage outside the airport terminal and baggage handlers report losing load sheets, according to a PWA spokesman.

The crooked crow has also managed to swipe parking tickets from cars.

For a while, everyone was amused by the bird's actions, but airport employees now say the fun is over and they plan to end the thievery in any manner possible.

Camp life not so friendly, visitor finds

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A former West Vancouver resident says he was detained for three days at a camp in California by members of a group who tried to brainwash him.

Fraser Tweedy, 21, said he accepted an invitation to the isolated camp but was not given a ride back to San Francisco on the day he wanted to leave as he had been promised.

Tweedy, who now studies at Durham University in England but is visiting friends and relatives in the Vancouver area, said he never learned the group's name.

Its techniques, he said, seem similar to those used by "Moonies", followers of Rev. Sun Myung. Tweedy said he only heard about Moonies after leaving the camp.

"There was never any force," he said in an interview Sunday. "It was not physical. But the psychological pressure was extreme. After a time I didn't know my own mind."

Tweedy said his involvement with the group began when he was approached by "a pleasant guy" in San Francisco where he was visiting. He met other people who all seemed friendly, then agreed to visit the camp, partly because he was curious and partly because the people seemed friendly.

Along with others, Tweedy was taken by bus first to a ranch about 200 kilometres from San Francisco, then to a camp about two hours drive away.

At the second camp, which had double locked gates, the group chanted, played games, repeated slogans and made confessions. Lectures were intensified and people were asked to talk about their lives, he said.

Tweedy said he resisted, at one point singing rugby songs instead of spiritual chants. When he asked to leave Saturday, he was told there was no transport.

Last Sunday night, he and two others boarded a bus bound for San Francisco. It was loaded with "actionizers", the group's name for members who walked the streets and invited people like Tweedy "back for lunch."

"The actionizers kept apart from us. They were getting a pep talk to psych them up for their work in San Francisco."

When he returned to the city, he noticed that his airline ticket was missing. He was forced to take a bus back to Vancouver.

Tweedy said he didn't notify police about what had happened because force was never used and because he had accepted an invitation to go there.

PNE site of roller record try

VANCOUVER (CP) — Richard Rodriguez, from Brooklyn, is out to set a gut-wrenching, knee-trembling record at this year's Pacific National Exhibition.

Rodriguez, 21, climbed aboard the exhibition ground's roller coaster Sunday and doesn't plan to get off for 170 hours; long enough to break his own Guiness World Book record of 145 consecutive hours.

This year's fair started off with another record Saturday. Officials said 1,219,392 people passed through the gates on the first day, an increase of 10,000 from last year.

Today's Markets

Toronto

The Toronto Stock Exchange said shares of Block Brothers Industries Ltd. will be removed from the trading list at the close Wednesday at the company's request following a one-for-1,000 consolidation of its stock.

Shares of East Malartic Mines Ltd. will trade from the opening Friday under the company's new name of Les Mines Est-Malartic Ltee.

New York

The stock market gained ground today as surging oil issues offset declines based on worries about the possibility of further interest rate increases.

Leading the increase were oil issues, which continued to draw strength from favorable earnings pictures and also got momentum from President Carter's decontrol of so-called "heavy" crude oil last Friday.

The strength in those issues countered fears that further increases in interest rates may be in the offing. Last week, the prime lending rate rose to a record-tying 12 per cent, and many experts believe it is headed higher.

London

The Financial Times index was down 9.9 to 464.3.

Industrials, oils, banks and gold declined.

Canadian stocks were also lower.

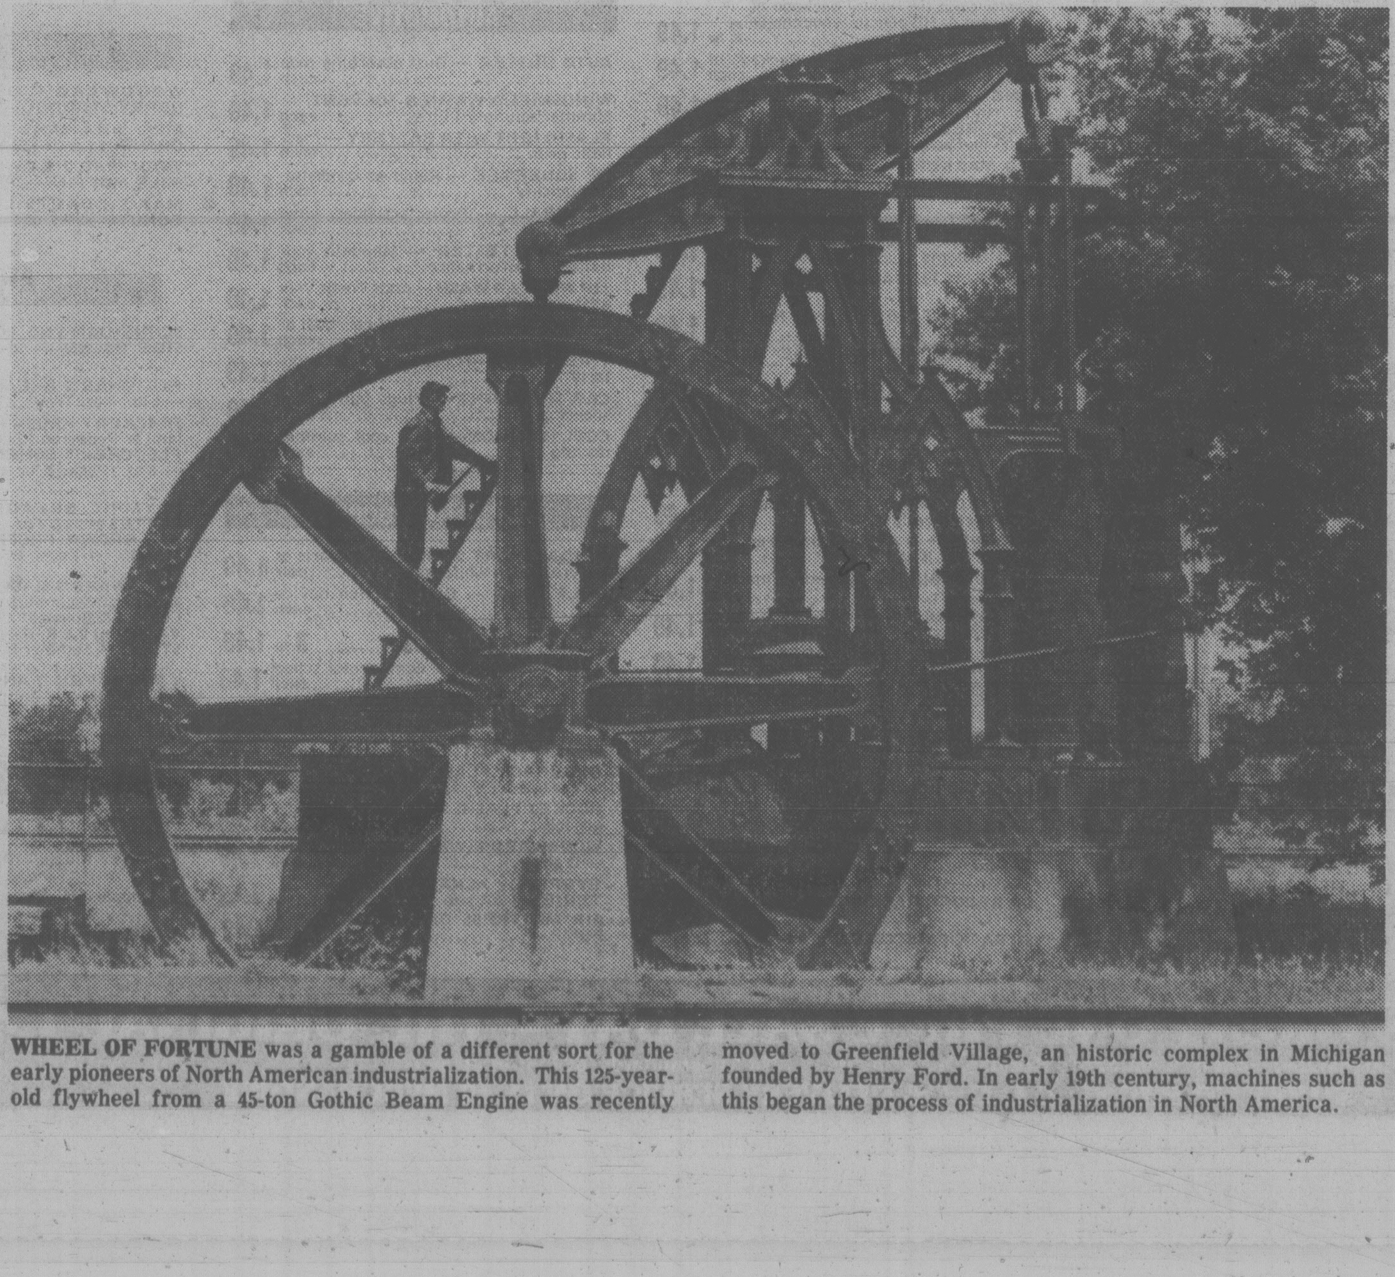
Lawyer seeks Hess freedom

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Rudolf Hess's lawyer has complained to the European Human Rights Commission that continued imprisonment of the former deputy to Adolf Hitler is a violation of his rights. Hess, 85, was convicted by the Nuernberg tribunal of helping to plot the Second World War and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He is the only Nazi criminal left in Berlin's Spandau prison. The complaint was directed at Britain and France who, with the Soviet Union and the U.S. are responsible for guarding Hess.



WHEEL OF FORTUNE was a gamble of a different sort for the early pioneers of North American industrialization. This 125-year-old flywheel from a 45-ton Gothic Beam Engine was recently moved to Greenfield Village, an historic complex in Michigan founded by Henry Ford. In early 19th century, machines such as this began the process of industrialization in North America.

Profits boom just accounting error

By LAWRENCE MOULE
The Canadian Press

If you bought a house in 1960 for $25,000 and sold it today for $120,000, you would realize a tidy profit, at least on paper.

But inflation also has been at work and if you were to reinvest your money in another house, paying, say, $105,000 for it, your gain in real terms would be much less.

And while that analogy may be over-simplified, that, in large measure, is the problem faced by Canadian industrial corporations.

Out-moded accounting methods show profits rising, sometimes astronomically, but there is the fear in some business sectors that despite their increase, profits are actually too low to attract investment capital for future growth.

The federal inflation monitoring agency reports that after-tax profits of industrial corporations rose 21 per cent in 1978 from the previous year. They jumped more than 58 per cent in the first quarter of this year from the same period in 1978.

But as John Adams, president of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants (CICA), noted in a recent speech in Sarnia, Ont., Canadians are witnessing "the phenomena of corporations reporting so-called record earnings at the same time that these same corporations are digging themselves into a liquidity crisis."

The CICA, at the request of the federal and Ontario governments, is developing a proposal for a new accounting model to show managers, investors and governments where corporate profits really stand. Adams predicted Canadian public companies will be reporting 1981 results using both conventional accounting and the new model, known as current value accounting.

Simply speaking, current value accounting places a value on inventories and fixed assets based on current costs, rather than historical costs as in conventional accounting.

It is intended to eliminate statistical absurdities such as those reported in June, 1977, by the Ontario government's committee on inflation accounting.

The committee found that:

— Between 1971 and 1976, the reported profits of Canadian companies more than doubled. But because of increased capital costs and the weakened dollar, profits in real terms were lower in 1976 than in 1971.

— Taking the effects of inflation into account, many businesses paid dividends to shareholders out of capital, not profit, during 1974 and 1975.

— Because reported profits were inflated, so were taxes. The effective tax rate of non-financial companies between 1971 and 1975 rose to 77 per cent from 58 per cent, even though the average legislated corporate tax rate dropped to about 45 per cent from 51 per cent during that time.

The need to correct such distortions is becoming urgent because Canada will need a vast sum of investment capital in the next decade.

Andrew Kniewasser, president of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada, said today's accounting methods inhibit investment because they create uncertainty over the effects of inflation and because taxes are maintained at artificially high levels.

"Companies suffer from not having a realistic assessment of where they are. Government policies are based on statistical accounts of earnings, so companies are penalized through the tax system.

"The key to restoring the competitiveness of the Canadian economy is to get more capital into productive purposes.

"One of the ways you do it is by having a tax system which encourages real after-tax profitability from enterprises and thus attracts capital.

"Any government I know in Canada would welcome a sensible, workable accounting system. The accounting profession has a real responsibility to get on with it."

Royal Trust to pay daily interest

TORONTO (CP) — Royal Trust has announced that it will introduce a new daily interest savings account Oct. 1 at its 111 offices across Canada.

The new account will pay interest calculated on the daily closing balance at a rate of 9.25 per cent to be credited semi-annually, April 30 and Oct. 31. No minimum balance is required.

Any entries made at the counter, either withdrawals or transfers, are free and unlimited.

Red tape rankles independents

TORONTO (CP) — Government regulation and paperwork, inflation and financing were the problems named most serious in a survey of the 16,000 members of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business.

Government regulation was named by 16.1 per cent of the members, inflation by 15.5 per cent and financing by 15.1 per cent.

Much of the survey dealt with the treatment of small business by banks. Federation president John Bulloch said the survey indicates the banks are doing reasonably well.

Three-quarters of the businesses said their bank provided sufficient funds for short-term financing, but the percentage dropped to 69 per cent when asked about long-term loans for expansion.

Mortgage rates bumped again

TORONTO (CP) — A second major mortgage lender has raised its rates last week, its second round of increases in a month.

Canada Trustco Mortgage Co. Ltd. announced increases of one-quarter of a percentage point, bringing its rates on one- to five-year closed conventional mortgages to 12 per cent, its one- to five-year open conventional mortgages to 12¼ per cent and its three- to five-year closed mortgages issured under the National Housing Act to 11¾ per cent.

Environment watchdog carries corporate clout

TORONTO (CP) — A new position has been created in the hierarchy of some Canadian companies — corporate environmentalist.

Unknown a couple of decades ago, the new breed of environment-watchers has appeared in response to widespread concern over pollution in the 1960s and '70s, and subsequent tougher government regulations.

Most are high-ranking executives and many have direct access to the board of directors.

"I can get things stopped very, very fast if I see something I don't like — and if I have the data," said David Young, manager of environmental affairs for Dow Chemicals of Canada Ltd., a Sarnia-based company.

Stuart Warner, vice-president of occupational health and environment for Inco Ltd. of Toronto, said he has a small staff but "we have a lot of power."

Some environmentalists might not be convinced of the sincerity of the efforts, but companies respond with a stack of bills related to cleaner water, ground or air.

Warner, for instance, says Inco spent about $120 million for environment-related projects between 1970 and June, 1977.

Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) is spending about $85 million, or 10 to 15 per cent of the capital costs of the company's new steel mill at Nanticoke near Lake Erie, to create what it calls an environmental showcase.

The mill will be separated from the town by artificial hills, 80,000 trees and a 800-acre greenbelt.

Bruce Edwards, environmental officer for Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. (Alcan), started with the company 32 years ago as a metallurgical engineer.

When he was appointed to the post in 1964, environmental matters "started off as part of the job, but grew and grew; now it's completely environment-oriented."

Young said a company's public image has become an important factor in the creation of corporate environmentalist positions.

"If you operate a dirty shop, you're going to get some black eyes."

With arguments that committed environmentalists would say align the company's pollution-watchers too closely with businessmen more interested in profits than clean air, Warner says the trade-off between environmental expenditures and job creation is not always understood.

He says if he goes to the Inco board with a proposal to spend $100 million for environmental purposes, "in terms of traditionally-defined return on investment, mine looks the worst."

Alben Chmelauskas, director of environmental control for MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. of Vancouver, said there is "obviously a certain amount of reluctance by the production people" to environmental spending.

"Not that they don't believe in environmental control, but they're always looking for capital."

Recently, however, the profit motive has become more of a friend of the environmentalist.

With higher energy costs, many companies now find it makes economic sense to limit emissions that are letting expensive energy escape and to recycle waste materials.

MacMillan Bloedel, for example, is investing in equipment to dry waste wood to use in replacing fuel in boilers.

The corporate environmentalists find themselves in an unusual position because their positions have been created by government and public pressure. If they do their job well enough to eliminate the environmental complaints, their positions will be redundant.

Join the Navy. . . and keep smiling

Chief Petty Officer Fred Pegley, a 28-year naval veteran, was aboard the anti-submarine destroyer HMCS, which pulled into port during the weekend.

"We call it showing the flag," Pegley said. "You've got to do it. To us, it's an evil, but it's necessary.

"It's nice to be in harbor and meet people but we'd all like it a hell of a lot better if they brought a thousand civvies down to the coast, put them on a ship and took them out. Then they'd know what the navy really is."

But the major hardships for the crew are not caused by sightseers, Pegley said. Moving the ship from port to port for weeks on end takes the greatest toll.

Taking the ship through canal and seaway locks is a long and difficult job. The crew have to hold lines attached to heavy wooden bumpers to avoid damage to the thin hull.

"The crew are standing the full length of the ship with them," Pegley said. "It's a young man's job. At 48, I was dragging my rear."

The ship, based in Halifax, is on a 30-day cruise of Great Lakes ports.

"We just keep going from one to another. You spend all night up in the locks, and then everyone expects you to look neat and natty. But you're dog-tired."

Besides indulging the public, the government makes other less worthy demands on the navy, said Pegley. It fiddles around with the tried and true naval uniform, for example, and makes the sailors wear the results.

Joining the army, navy and air force into the Canadian Armed Forces motivated the orginal change.

"I've even been confused with doormen," Pegley said.

"Some turkey in Ottawa — it's got to be Ottawa — is constantly making changes to it. Buttons here, buttons there — it's enough to drive you up the wall. Politics. It all comes back to politics."

The high number of dropouts among recruits is one of the navy's greatest problems.

"The attrition rate is about 75 per cent for the first five years," Pegley said, citing lonely wives and the attractions of unemployment insurance as the major contributing factors.

"The kids are more affluent now too. When I first joined the navy one in 600 guys had a car. Today, all the kids are going out to buy $6,000 motorcycles."

But Able Seaman Claude Gagnon, 20, of Montreal said he has no plans to jump ship before his five-year contract expires in the spring of 1983.

He said that those who quit probably didn't like the sea when they got out there.

Gagnon said he enjoys the job, but training "is hard work — even if you're in good shape."

Wheat sales boom seen

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian farmers can expect continued strong demand and high prices for their grain this year with this country's export capability being the most limiting force on prospective sales.

A spokesman for the Canadian wheat board said forecasts of an over-all reduction in world crop production, particularly in the Soviet Union and to a lesser extent in Eastern and Western Europe, stands out as the single most important factor in continuing market strength.

Latest estimates by the U.S. Department of Agriculture put this year's total Soviet crop at 185 million tonnes, a substantial decline from the record 237 million tonnes last year.

Poor growing conditions for the Soviet Union's winter wheat crop and more adverse weather this spring and summer have created the pessimism in that country.

As a result, the U.S. estimates the Soviet Union will import about 32.5 million tonnes of wheat and feed grain, almost twice the imports of last year. Such a volume would have a major impact on exporting countries such as Canada.

Canadian professor booted by Soviets

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Irwin Cotler, a Canadian law professor who has been campaigning for the release of imprisoned human-rights dissident Anatoly Shcharansky, was expelled from the Soviet Union Sunday, a Canadian Embassy official confirmed here.

Cotler of the McGill University law faculty in Montreal, was on his way to visit Shcharansky's parents outside Moscow when he was stopped by police and ordered to leave the country immediately, according to a message he left for the Los Angeles Times with Japan Airlines. He flew to London on a JAL flight at 4:10 Moscow time Sunday afternoon.

Shcharansky's parents celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday with a one-day hunger strike in protest over the treatment of their son. Cotler had intended to join them for the occasion.

Their 31-year-old son was arrested more than 2½ years ago after a brief but noteworthy dissident career in which he became one of the leading spokesmen for Jewish activists, and human-rights dissidents here. He was tried and convicted last summer on charges of espionage, and was sentenced to 13 years in prison camps. The trial caused a stream of protests in the West, and marked the recent low point in Soviet-American relations.

Lately the young activist has been suffering from severe and recurring headaches in prison. He is not receiving adequate medical care, according to his mother.

Shcharansky's mother is 71 and his father is 75. He also has an older brother still living in the Soviet Union.

Cotler had been told previously by the state travel bureau, Intourist, that he would be allowed to go to the Shcharansky's home in a nearby village. But on the way there, he was stopped and told he must leave the Soviet Union. He had not been scheduled to leave for another several days, according to his message.

Cotler arrived in Moscow as a delegate to an international political scientists convention on Aug. 11. He has been acting on behalf of Shcharansky's emigre wife, Avital, seeking to appeal the dissident's case before the Soviet supreme court. He is considered an expert in Soviet constitutional law, and advises other dissidents, as well. He has already presented a lengthy appeal on the Shcharansky case through the Soviet Embassy in Canada.

Cotler had visited while in Moscow with dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov, and was also involved in an incident during last week's political science meeting.

Alexander Lerner, another Jewish activist and longtime "refusednik" had been invited by conference organizers to deliver a paper at that meeting on the use of mathematics in political analysis. The Soviet authorities, however, barred him from the meeting.

Cotler was among those who protested the action. Lerner never was allowed to give his paper, but a statement deploring his exclusion, was read into the meeting minutes on behalf of delegates from 10 Western countries, including the United States and Canada.

A Canadian Embassy official said here Sunday night that he did not think the mission would protest Cotler's expulsion.

Firemen still out

HALIFAX (CP) — Skeleton crews of non-union officers of the city's fire department have answered more than 25 minor calls since a strike by city firemen started last Friday.

By Sunday only four of the calls were actual fires that had to be extinguished by the 13-member force.

The strike is the first by firemen in the city's 230-year history.

Negotiation attempts between the city and the union broke off Saturday after a marathon 12-hour session.

Both the city and the union have indicated they are willing to return to the bargaining table but no time or date had been set by Sunday night.

Super fishboat drowning in government red tape

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The costly dream of four fishermen in this north coast British Columbia city could collapse unless the federal fisheries department bails them out.

The $4 million factory trawler Callistratus, the largest fishing vessel ever registered in Canada, has been tied up in the city's harbor since July 1. It has only completed two fishing trips since its delivery last January from a Japanese shipyard.

A one million pound catch of hake is still on ice, unsold because of a glut on the world market.

"We've sold some but it's a drop in the bucket," said Ken Harding, general manager of Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-operative.

"Unless we can come up with something in the next three or four months, there will be serious problems, but we're still hoping something will materialize."

Owners of the 50-metre Callistratus are hoping the federal fisheries department will charter the vessel to conduct needed research into fish stocks in Canada's 320-kilometre offshore zone and to give them time to solve their marketing problems.

Despite verbal promises before the last election, government restraint appears to have killed the charter plan, although a last-ditch appeal will be made soon to Fisheries Minister James McGrath.

The four fishermen involved — Sid Dickens, Alan Hemmons, Dave Lorette and Hans Eifert, all of Prince Rupert — put up $500,000.

The principal financial backers — the B.C. Credit Union, the Prince Rupert Credit Union, the fishermen's co-operative and the Canadian Co-operative Credit Society of Toronto — have refused to pour any more money into the project. Jointly, they are owed $3 million.

The vessel's hull alone cost $3 million and an additional $1 million was spent to equip it with the latest technology acquired from all over the world.

Performance exceeded expectations in its inital shakedown cruise, but Harding said the world hake surplus has forced the price down to a low of 30 cents a pound for small hake of the type the Callistratus has been catching. And even at that price there are no takers.

The fisheries department says the vessel could go after other bottom feeders including pollock, rock cod and squid. But the market for squid is not fully developed and the rock cod quota was quickly taken in northern waters.

In addition to the marketing problems, the financial backers blame fisheries department inertia for not researching fish stocks in the 320-kilometre zone.

Add this to your list of wacky B.C. sports

KAMLOOPS (CP) — British Columbia, which already boasts snow golf and world bellyflop championships among its wacky sports events, added another to the list Sunday with the running of the first Kamloops snowmobile river-crossing.

Fourteen snowmobile enthusiasts from around the province tried to cross a nearly one-half kilometre stretch of the North Thompson River near this city.

Three drivers, all from Kamloops, surprised 2,000 onlookers when they managed to keep their machines on top of the water long enough to get to the other side.

Most of the rest saw their machines sink after less than 30 metres. All the machines were later recovered.

Fred Turner won the $500 first prize after he went 15 metres farther than promoter Terry Reeb and his brother, Robin, in a run-off along the river.

Robin Reeb said many drivers were sinking shortly after they hit the water because they had not done any work on their motors since winter.

"If you don't have your engine tuned properly you won't reach the proper speed when you hit the water," he said. "You're not going fast enough when you hit the water and then you start to bounce."

Those who didn't sink, he said, were "hitting the water about 70 m.p.h (110 kmh) and were avoiding the bouncing."

Firemen rescue sailboat

A 29-foot sailboat anchored off the beach at the home of owner Julie McCartney, 5153 Cordova Bay, slipped its mooring during the blustery afternoon and had grounded by the time help arrived.

Logging road halted by row

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction of a $20,000 logging road into the Akamina Valley in southeastern British Columbia has been halted amid arguments about its necessity in the first place.

Last May, the commercial value of about 2,600 acres of diseased lodgepole pine in the valley was judged to outweigh the recreational and wilderness values of the Akamina-Kishinena Valley.

However, Crows' Nest Industries now says only 740 acres can be logged and that will not even provide enough stumpage revenue to pay for the road.

Phil Whitfield, a Parks Branch planning officer, said it looks like the road will end up costing the taxpayers money.

Whitfield said the forest service is less interested in salvaging lodgepole pine than in guarding its land base.

"It's a case of sending in the troops to occupy the area for future logging," he said.

The B.C. Forest Service promoted and paid for the road.

"We've stopped building now but I agree it's not a very good thing the road got that far," said zone forester Ross Tozer.

However, he said Crows' Nest officials had okayed forest service estimates on the timber available and road construction began on that basis.

Four die in traffic mishaps

At least four people have died as a result of weekend traffic mishaps in the province.

A 65-year-old Crofton man was killed Saturday night when the car he was driving left a road near the community.

RCMP said Earl McMillan was alone in the vehicle when it plunged into a ditch.

Near Squamish, three youths were killed and a young woman was in hospital following a two-vehicle collision Saturday night on Highway 99.

Dead are James George Columbus, 18, his brother Roy Gregory, 16, both of Squamish, and Joseph Robert Tremblay, 16, of Nanaimo.

Beverley Anne McCallum, 20, of Powell River, the only occupant of the second car, is in hospital in North Vancouver with undetermined head injuries.

5th Battery marks 40th anniversary

The 5th (BC) Field Battery of the Royal Canadian Artillery will hold a reunion in the Bay Street Armoury. Aug. 25.

The gathering will mark the 40th anniversary of the unit being called up Aug. 26, 1939 to man coastal defence guns during the Second World War.

The officers and sergeants' messes will be open to all former members at 8 p.m.

The reunion is being hosted by the unit's commanding officer, Major Ian Smith, and, as in past years, is being co-ordinated by Major Chuck MacLeod.

Similar reunions have been held every five years.

During the war 55 Battery manned the six-inch guns at Fort Mary Hill, 56 Battery, headquartered at Fort Rodd Hill, manned 12-pounders at Fort Belmont, Black Rock, the breakwater and, later, Golf Hill. The 2 Anti-Aircraft Battery manned Macaulay Point and the 17th Searchlight Regiment was deployed from Clover Point to Mary Hill.

THE DARN NEAR PERFECT CAR.

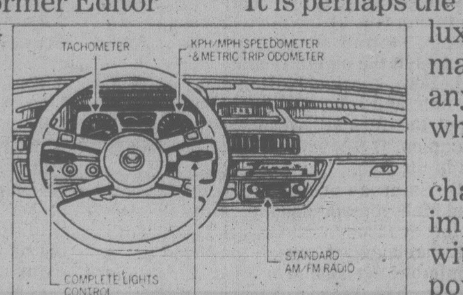
"It's the darn near perfect car." We didn't say it, David Pearson said it. He said it to Brock Yates. In case you don't know, David Pearson is a Grand National Stock Car Racing Champion and Brock Yates is a former Editor of Car and Driver magazine, so they both know a bit about cars. And both of them have owned Honda Accord Hatchbacks.

And that isn't all they said. Brock Yates commented further: "One contemplates an Accord and thinks, why in the name of Ransom E. Olds can't all cars be as neatly engineered? Here comes a manufacturer noted for motorcycles, portable generators and outboard motors that within fewer years than you can count on your hands builds a car decades ahead of many of those built by people who've been involved with the business for half a century."

Their enthusiasm is not hard to understand. Unless, of course, you've never driven an Accord yourself. It is perhaps the best combination of luxury and performance that is available anywhere, at anywhere near its price.

An Accord's mechanical credentials are impeccable. It comes with front wheel drive, power assisted front disc brakes, rack and pinion steering, 5-speed transmission and fully independent MacPherson strut suspension. All of which help make it a joy to drive.

Small wonder that some of the world's most knowledgeable car enthusiasts own, and love to drive Honda Accords.



HAS A PERFECT PARTNER.

If any criticism of the Accord Hatchback was possible, it might have been that it was a 2-door and therefore not exactly suited to someone who might have a family. We're not sure if anyone ever made that criticism. However, if they did (and even if they didn't), we've answered it. Honda Accord Hatchback, the darn near perfect car, now has a perfect partner: the new Honda Accord 4-door sedan.

Both of the Accords share the same impeccable mechanical features. Both are exciting to drive.

But the sedan offers you extra interior room plus the convenience of 4 doors. Inside the Accord, you'll find yourself seated on fully reclining front bucket seats that are upholstered in warm, comfortable cloth. Directly in front of you, every Accord has extensive instrumentation that lets you know what's happening, when. Including lights that tell you if any of the doors are not closed, or if a brake light is burned out. And just to the right, is a standard AM/FM radio.

But the best way to discover an Accord's qualities is to go to a Honda dealer and see for yourself. Look carefully at the fit, the finish and the detailing of the car. Then take one for a test drive. Whether you're interested in the hatchback or sedan, we think you'll agree with David Pearson. Either one of them is the darn near perfect car.

Rowers, Delesalle enjoy big harvest

SASKATOON (CP) — Alberta swim coach Sandy Osborne of Edmonton came prepared to the final day of swimming at the Western Canada Summer Games. She wore a bathing suit under her skirt.

Osborne knew that she, Neil Muir and the rest of the team's coaching staff would get the traditional dunking a winning team gives its bosses.

British Columbia, which won the over-all swimming championship at the 1975 Games in Regina, was second with nine golds.

But the pool performance by Alberta swimmers did not prevent B.C. from capturing the team championship at the games, paced by strong performances on the wrestling mat, in the boxing ring, the diving pool, on the track and in rowing and men's gymnastics.

B.C. won a total of 87 gold medals, while Alberta picked up 59, Manitoba 31 and Saskatchewan 17.

A final points standings gave the West Coast team 75.5 points, followed by 57 for Alberta, 51 for Manitoba and 45.5 for the host province.

The finishing order was identical to the Regina games, when B.C. piled up 83.5 points, Alberta had 68.5, Manitoba 43 and Saskatchewan 40.

Gordy Pynn, general manager of the B.C. team, said Sunday the province performed about the same as in 1975, although final point totals show that Manitoba and Saskatchewan are improving.

"Our teams sports were probably encountering some severe competition from the Prairies, and Alberta came on very strong on the track. I talked to coaches and athletes who were at the last Games and they're quite surprised at the closing of the gap."

The track and field medals were split 17-17 between Alberta and B.C., while Manitoba picked up four and Saskatchewan had two. Manitoba and Saskatchewan each took a gold medal in basketball, while B.C. won in field hockey, soccer and water polo.

Alberta and B.C. split golds in team handball and Manitoba and Saskatchewan each took a gold in volleyball.

The West Coast's swimming performance suffered because many of B.C.'s top swimmers are with the Canadian national team for meets in the Soviet Union and Japan. The team did boast Commonweatlh Games gold medallist Lisa Borsholt, who set Western Canada Games records in the 100- and 200-metre breast stroke.

Manitoba managed to maintain a third over-all in the standings, aided by its showings in men's basketball, cycling, canoeing and weightlifting.

Victoria gymnast Philip Delesalle's five-medal performance was not a surprise, but Allan Reddon, a 17-year-old junior from Edmonton, nipped Delesalle in the vault and posted three second-place finishes behind Canada's number one male gymnast.

Delesalle injured his back on a dismount from the horizontal bar but the injury, believed to be a slightly compressed vertebra, was not initially considered serious by team trainers.

Sparked by Delesalle's performance in gymnastics and B.C.'s clear domination in rowing, Victoria and district athletes came away with a flock of medals from closing events.

Victoria athletes came away with 25 gold medals, five silver and six bronze on the last two days.

In addition to Delesalle's five, equestrienne Lynne Trickett of Sidney and rowers John Alexander, Phil Haggerty, Alix Peden, Brenda Cook and Jane Pavelich each won two.

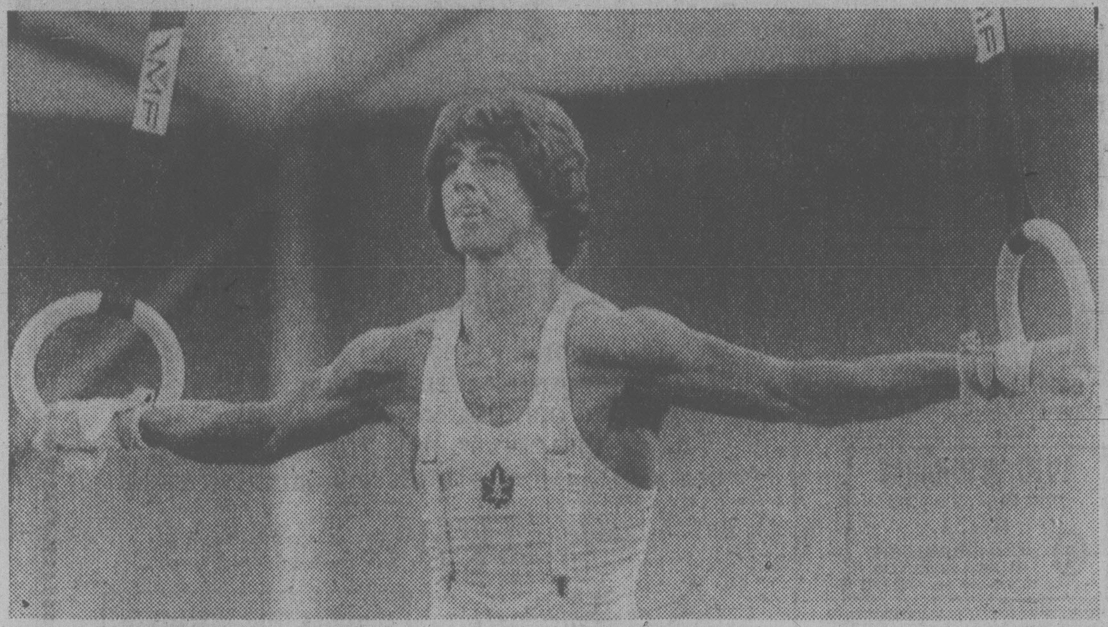
John Hammond, Gord Langer, Dean Crawford, Ian Young, Sheelagh Lean, Doug Moffat and Ken McRae also added golds in rowing events.

And Bibby, while failing to collect a gold, was another big winner with a silver and four bronze in gymnastics.

Others collecting medals included swimmer Stan Davis, archers Gerri Cosgrove and Wanda Allan and weightlifter Rob MacKlem.

Rob Hagerty, Games general manager, pronounced the week-long event a success and praised the diligence of some 2,000 voluteers who worked on the project.

He said the Games could, with a little better management, have been staged for something less than the more than $8 million spent by government, lottery and private sources.



HANGING AROUND as he does his routine on rings during gymnastics competition at Western Canada Summer Games is Philip Delesalle of Victoria. Delesalle won all but one of individual events and captured men's over-all title to help British Columbia take team crown. (CP laserpohoto)

Turnovers hurt

Victoria Dolphins fell afoul of turnovers in the second half Sunday and dropped a 24-10 decision to Renfrew Trojans in a B.C. Big Four Junior Football League game at Royal Athletic Park.

Dolphins were unable to move the ball consistently and trailed 10-3 at half time.

Then the running of Kym Clarke, John Buxcey and Glen Elford bagan to produce results but a series of four turnovers kept Trojans out in front.

Paul Docherty produced all the points for Dolphins, kicking a 42-yard field goal in the first half and adding a touchdown and the conversion after the break.

Bernie Kidd threw the touchdown pass.

Vital sweep for Mussels

Victoria Mussels have pulled into second place in the Northern Division and a few more victorious "tugs" might haul the Canadian entry into contention for the Northwest League baseball championship.

Mussels clubbed Bellingham Mariners 9-5 Saturday at Royal Athletic Park and then launched a crucial series in Walla Walla on Sunday by blanking the division-leading Padres 5-0 behind the shutout pitching of Doug Mathey.

The weekend sweep lifted Mussels within four games of first place and presented Victoria with a glorious chance to gain more ground. Mussels have five games remaining with the leaders. They face the Padres tonight and Tuesday, play three games with the last-place Grays Harbor Loggers before returning for a six-game stand that will wrap up the season. Three of Victoria's final home games are against Walla Walla.

Tommy Dorsey blasted a three-run homer and Dan Purpura belted two singles to support Mathey, who struck out nine and allowed only one walk.

Dorsey's homer came after two outs in the fifth inning.

Doug Lulay had a pair of doubles for the Padres.

At home Saturday, pitcher Tom Candiotti proved toughest with men on bases and Purpura slammed a three-run double and then scored in the fifth inning as Victoria defeated Bellingham.

Catcher Gary Ledbetter drove in three runs with a pair of hits and first baseman Emil Drzayich batted in two runs.

Rain erases play in test

LEEDS, England (Reuter) — Rain washed out play Saturday for the second day running in the third cricket Test between England and India.

Until today, only 160 minutes of play on the opening day Thursday had been possible. During that time, England made 80 for four in its first innings.

England is one up in the four-match series and appears certain to take the lead into the final Test, starting at the London Oval on Aug. 30.

Two Victorians on rifle team

OTTAWA (CP) — P.J. Evans, a 31-year-old electrician from Longueuil, Que., won the Governor-General's Medal at the 97th annual Dominion of Canada Rifle Association prize meeting.

Evans defeated Steven Thomas of England by one point Saturday as he finished with an aggregate score of 390 out of a possible 405 to give Canada the medal for a third consecutive year.

In other Saturday competition, Charlie Bell of Calgary won the Gatineau Match in a shootoff with Pat Vamplew of Toronto. The President's trophy went to Alain Marion of Pointe Gatineau, Que., and Vicki Boa, of Hoffman Estates, Ill., took the Tess Spencer trophy.

More trophies were awarded to Canadian marksmen Sunday after judges tallied aggregate scores accumulated since last weekend at Connaught Ranges.

George Chase of Grand Bay, N.B., won the Gzowski Aggregate with 166 points of 175, Marion took the Maple Leaf Aggregate with 355 out of 370 and Des Vamplew of Toronto scored 859 out of 905 to win the Bisley Aggregate.

Chase, Vamplew, and Marion also scored at least 844 points in the Bisley Aggregate to win places on the DCRA team for the 1980 Commonwealth matches at Bisley, England.

Rivals getting tougher but Budgets still best

PORT ALBERNI — Field manager Harvey Stevenson sees British Columbia opposition is getting tougher, but his Victoria Budgets continue to rule the men's softball roost.

The Pan-American Games champions are heading for the Canadian finals for a record ninth consecutive time after successfully defending the provincial title here at the weekend.

Victoria's bats, usually explosive against Canadian teams, were contained to a respectful degree so Budgets' dependable pitching staff had to be in peak form to produce a ninth straight B.C. championship.

Budgets opened the six-team, double-knockout tournament Saturday by clipping Clearbrook Four-Stars 3-1 and Vancouver Thirsks 3-0. Budgets clinched a berth in the final by blanking New Westminster Woods Hotel 1-0, and then wrapped it up by beating the Westminster squad 3-0 in the telling game.

Victoria pitchers Mark Smith, Andy Konopacki, Dave Wilson and Dave Ruthowsky each took a victory and never allowed more than four hits in any game. And in shutting out the opposition for 26 consecutive innings, Victoria hurlers allowed only two walks in the four games.

Making it easy was Budgets' sparkling defense, which committed only one error during the weekend.

The only run scored against Victoria was a home run by Clearbrook's Stan Weins, giving Four Stars a 1-0 lead in the tournament opener.

Budgets got the runs they needed two innings later when triples by Dennis Eckert and Dave Williams sandwiched a single by catcher Sonny Phillips.

Williams was the hero in Sunday's 1-0 victory, giving Wilson the run he needed when the diminutive outfielder scored an inside-the-park homer in the third.

Williams went 2-for-2 in that game, scored a run in the decider and was voted the tournament's most valuable player. Woods' pitcher Paul Schriver, who had a 3-1 record and pitched the last 17 innings for New Westminster, was the series' top hurler while Port Alberni's Rick Chase was the top hitter with a .500 average.

Williams went 4-for-9 in the series.

Second baseman Carl Walker, going 3-for-4 with a run-batted-in, and first baseman Bob Walton, unloading a two-run double, sparked Victoria's final-game attack.

Woods, with Schriver going all the way, reached the final by clipping Port Alberni 4-3 in 10 innings. Earlier, Port Alberni eliminated Clearbrook, 5-4.

Thirsks, expected to be one of Victoria's main challengers, and New Westminster Towers Blues both bowed out in two straight Saturday.

Victoria Shamrocks, getting ready for tonight's opening game in the best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association final series with Coquitlam Adanacs, have a problem.

It may be only a minor one, if goaltender Larry Smeltzer stays healthy.

A standout in Victoria's 4-1 semi-final conquest of New Westminster, Smeltzer has fully recovered from a touch of the flu that forced him to retire midway through the last game with the Salmonbellies.

He'll start tonight but the problem for coach Bill Munroe is the health of backup netminder Scott Marshall. Marshall suffered a bruised kidney when he came out of his crease and was checked by a New Westminster player last Wednesday.

Consequently, Mike Duch of the junior Esquimalt Legion team has been called up to serve as the backup netminder for the Memorial Arena game that starts at 8.

Otherwise, Shamrocks are healthy and ready. All hands, including Rick Baker, were at a Sunday workout.

Baker practiced for the first time since breaking a finger in the series opener with New Westminster.

Adanacs moved into the final against the defending champions by edging Vancouver Burrards 8-7 Saturday before more than 2,000 fans in Coquitlam to take their best-of-seven semi-final round 4-3.

Mike Reelie led Coquitlam with two goals and two assists.

Dave Tasker, with two goals and two assists, paced the Burrards, who pulled to within one goal after trailing 8-4 after two periods.

LeDoux earns draw

Minnesota's Scott LeDoux staggered Ken Norton twice in the final two rounds and rallied for a split-decision draw in a 10-round heavyweight fight Sunday Bloomington, Minn.

LeDoux knocked Norton down early in the 10th, and left-right combinations staggered the former World Boxing Council champion, 41-6-1, with less than 30 seconds left in the fight.

Victoria takes Western title

LLOYDMINSTER, Sask. — Victoria Senior Amateur League All-Stars gained a measure of revenge and captured the Western Canadian baseball championship by bouncing Waskada Orioles of Manitoba 15-2 Sunday.

Orioles had dropped Victoria 12-9 in the final game of the round-robin section of the tournament earlier Sunday, leaving both clubs with 3-1 marks.

Paul LeBlanc, a pickup from Nanaimo, hurled a five-hitter and struck out eight batters in the final game. Victoria pressed the attack with 17 hits, including home runs by Ron Holmes, George Pakos and Gary Brooke.

Holmes, Pakos and Glen Smith had hit homers in the earlier game with Manitoba as Victoria tried in vain to erase an 11-1 deficit.

Victoria opened the tournament Saturday with victories over Edmonton Cardinals 2-1 and Lloydminster Reds, 6-5.

LeBlanc threw a four-hitter for the win over Edmonton and Andy Gourlay, another Nanaimo pickup, hurled the victory over Lloydminster.

Cosmos settle for No. 2 rating

HERMISTON, Ore. — They had the greatest problem with their neighbors but Victoria Comsopolitan's second-place finish in the Pacific Northwest regional 13-year-old Babe Ruth baseball championships was still considered an excellent showing by the Canadian team.

Victoria's hopes of advancing to the "world series" ended Sunday when Spokane Valley, the Washington champions, thumped the Cosmos 19-4 in the final.

Washington beat B.C. 13-5 earlier in the tournament and Cosmos, coming back through the losers' bracket, had to beat Spokane Valley twice in order to advance to the next plateau.

Victoria reached Sunday's final by edging Idaho 7-6 Saturday night. Jeff Plecas went the distance and took credit for the victory by shutting off an Idaho rally in the seventh at two runs.

Plecas struck out 10, walked six and allowed six hits and also contributed a triple to the team's offense.

Mark Stein was the loser Sunday.

In stretch, experience a plus for contenders

By The Canadian Press

Philadelphia was expected to be a top contender at the start of the 1979 season and Houston was written off as an also-ran.

With the season about two-thirds gone, however, the National League East's fifth-place Phillies are straining for the top, while the NL West-leading Astros are slumping.

The Phillies, who were 9½ games behind Pittsburgh when they came to Houston, left with a three-game sweep that included a 3-2 come-from-behind victory Sunday and gained them a full game on the division-leading Bucs.

Meanwhile, Houston's lead, which had held since May 30, slipped to just 1½ games over the streaking Cincinnati Reds.

Philadelphia catcher Bob Boone said experience is not everything in winning a pennant, but it is important in a close stretch run.

"Experience here is what counts," he said. "It's not having a lull when it's tight, like they (the Astros) are now.

"This is the time when you have to go out and take it to the other teams, no matter whether it's at home or on the road," he continued.

It looked like the Astros were the aggressors Sunday as they jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a walk to Craig Reynolds, a triple by Terry Puhl and a sacrifice fly from Cesar Cedeno.

But the Phillies unleashed their aggression in the ninth, as Boone singled and Maddox tripled home pinch runner Bud Harrelson to tie the game. A single by Bowa brought home the winning run in Maddox.

Despite their fourth consecutive triumph, 5-1 over Atlanta Braves, Montreal Expos failed to gain on Pittsburgh Pirates who downed Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0. However, Houston's lead in the NL West was sliced to 1½ when Cincinnati beat New York Mets 6-5.

Elsewhere, Chicago Cubs downed San Diego Padres 3-1 and St. Louis Cardinals whipped San Francisco Giants 4-0.

Veteran pitcher Stan Bahnsen wriggled out of two jams after relieving Bill Lee in the sixth inning and also hit the first home run of his 12-year major league career, a two-run shot that helped Montreal defeat Atlanta and remain two games behind Pittsburgh.

Bill Lee, who won for the first time since July 21, was clipped for a first-inning homer by Atlanta's Gary Matthews. But the Expos responded with three runs in the bottom half, two on a homer by Gary Carter.

In the American, Kansas City Royals downed Baltimore 11-7, Chicago White Sox edged Boston Red Sox 3-2, New York Yankees got by Minnesota Twins 4-3, California Angels beat Toronto Blue Jays 4-2, Oakland A's eked out a 3-2 victory over Cleveland Indians, Milwaukee Brewers rallied to nip Texas Rangers 4-3 and Seattle Mariners outscored Detroit Tigers 8-4.

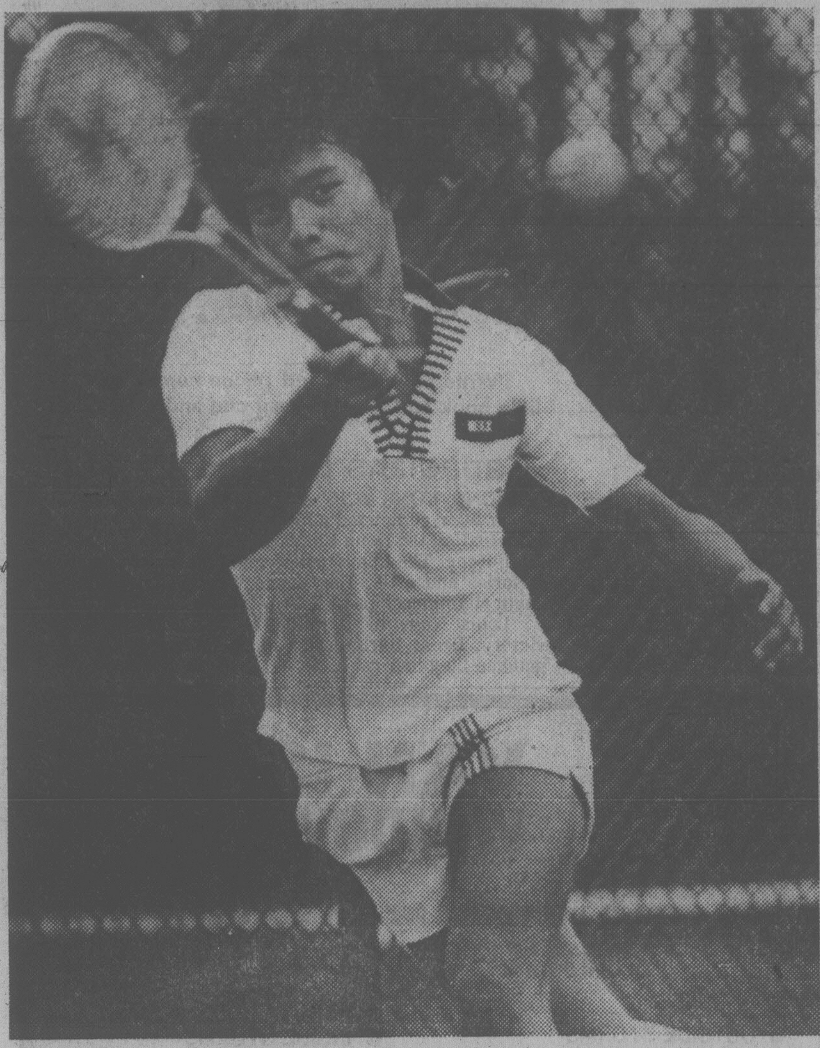
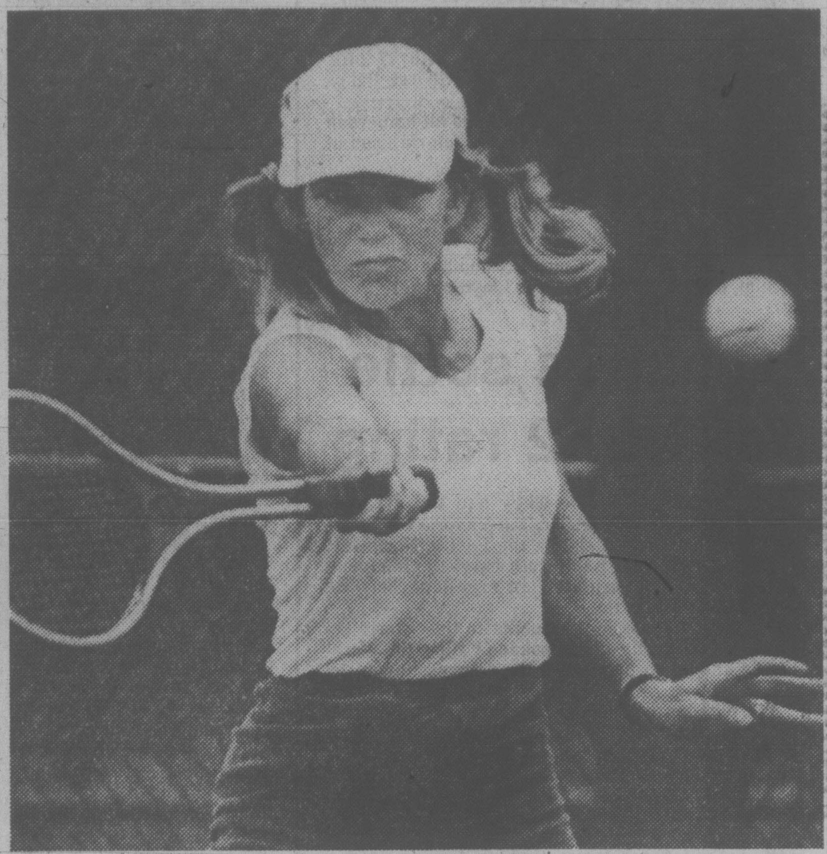
Two-time loser returns, takes two Times titles



Winner of two events in annual Times Public Park Tennis Tournament, Kerry Chan displays championship form.



Grim determination shows on face of women's champion Peggy Howes.

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Exactly one year ago, Kerry Chan featured in two finals in the fifth annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament. He lost them both.

On Sunday at Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts, Kerry more than made up for that by blasting his way to two titles when the sixth annual Times tourney wound up.

Last year it was the junior boys' singles and the mixed doubles finals he reached. This time it was tougher — both singles finals — and he set a record by becoming the first player in the six-year history of the event to capture two singles titles.

Only other player, in fact, to win more than one title in the same summer was former Hungarian tennis instructor Elvira Kapus who in 1977 took the women's singles and mixed doubles crowns.

But Kerry was even more impressive in winning the men's and boys' singles.

Using his unorthodox-looking Bjorn Borg-style western forehand to great effect and hitting some extreme angle shots, he went through a busy weekend of semi-finals and finals in both events without dropping a set.

After play was moved indoors to the Bubble at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre Saturday because of steady rain, Kerry crushed Neil Johnston, 6-1, 6-1, to reach the boys' final and then ousted 19-year-old Robert Exell, 6-3, 6-3, to make it into the men's final, too.

That in itself was quite a feat as there were 40 entries in the boys' event and a whopping 118 for the men's in the popular summer-long tournament designed exclusively for public parks players. But Kerry wasn't through.

Back on the outdoor courts at Henderson Park Sunday, he delighted the large crowd with his power and wide range of shots in holding off a strong challenge by 16-year-old Rick Folk to win the junior final, 6-4, 7-5. Rick, once coached by Aussie pro Ian Brady, was just as impressive Saturday in beating Henry Ducluzeau, 6-1, 6-0, and his match Sunday with Kerry was the best of the day.

Kerry, who has just turned 18 and has been coached for the last three years by veteran tennis instructor Celia Cousens, needed only half an hour rest before going back on the court to overpower 28-year-old Larry Mais, 6-2, 6-2, to take the men's title as well. Larry had been much more confident Saturday when downing Kerry's older brother Lorne Chan, 6-4, 6-2, to reach the final.

and he's coming back again

Former champions are not eligible to enter the same event again and when Victoria Times publisher Colin McCullough, who presented trophies to the winners and runners-up, told him "We'll miss you next year," Kerry replied quickly: "Oh, I'll be there to try for the mixed doubles title!"

As well as the prizes provided by the Times, each winner took home a new tennis racquet handed to them by Ken Holman, owner of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora.

When two close friends were drawn to play in the first round of the women's singles, one of them was quite agitated. Noreen Walmsley phoned the Times back then and said she played her neighbor Peggy Howes at least twice a week and in the last three years she hadn't beaten her once. She certainly didn't want to meet her in the first round of a tournament.

So we did a little shuffling so the friends were on opposite sides of the draw — but still the two couldn't avoid each other.

Peggy ousted Carolyn Jones, 6-4, 6-1, in the Bubble Saturday and when Noreen defeated Charlayne Joe, 6-3, 6-4, on the next court, she was still agitated.

"I don't event want to show up tomorrow!" she said adamantly.

But show up she did and she played well, too, leading 4-0 in the second set until Peggy recovered to take the women's title, 6-2, 7-5.

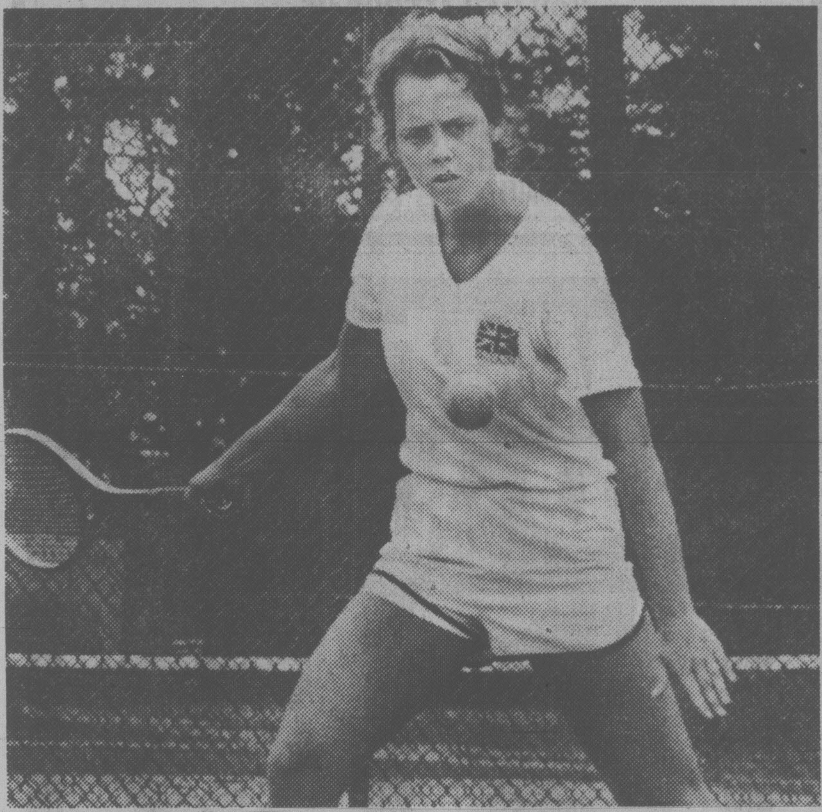
Janine Prince, a graduate of Mt. Doug High where she was a member of the school tennis team, was impressive in the girls' singles event.

She rallied to beat steady Carol Lauzon, 6-4, 6-4, in the semi-finals and then breezed past Joan Thomas, 6-1, 6-3, in Sunday's final. Joan had ousted Angela Kolic, 7-6, 6-3, in the semis.

The mixed doubles, which drew a starting field of 42 couples, was tough going all weekend.

Eric Dyke and Cindy Bray struggled and had to come from behind to beat youngsters Jay Wilson and Cory Aspden, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, in the semi-finals and then needed another three-setter Sunday to down Larry Christiansen and Sue Moilliet, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, to win the title. Larry and Sue had reached the finals with a 6-4, 6-1 win over Don and Peggy Howes.

Since the tournament started in 1974, the Vancouver Island Tennis Association has been co-sponsor with the Times and on Sunday VITA president Ted Smythe and vice-president Horace Kempster refereed the finals.



Mt. Doug grad Janine Prince captured girls' title.

Battle lines drawn for Canadian Open finalists

Times News Services

The battle lines were drawn Sunday for today's men's singles final at the Player's International Canadian Open tennis championships in Toronto.

"I'll come into the net a lot," said John McEnroe of the United States, whose victory over fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the U.S. earned him a berth in the final against top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

"John has a very strong serve," said Borg, a 6-3, 6-1 victor over Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia in the other semi-final Sunday. "You have to return very well and put lots of pressure on him."

Whatever the strategy, the match brings together two of the best in the game.

Elsewhere at the York University Tennis Centre on Sunday, Laura Dupont of the U.S. beat Brigitte Cuypers of South Africa 6-4, 6-7, 6-1 in the women's singles final. Lea Antonoplis of the U.S. and Dianne Evers of Australia beat Chris O'Neil of Australia and Mimmi Wikstedt of Sweden 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 in the women's doubles final.

Earlier Sunday, Gerulaitis beat Paul Kronk of Australia 6-0, 6-1 in a quarter-final match that had been suspended Friday night because of rain.

Warm, sunny conditions replaced the rain that postponed play Saturday and forced the men's singles final and men's doubles final of the $210,000 Grand Prix event to be held today.

The women's final was a dull affair, as could be expected after top-seeded Evonne Goolagong withdrew earlier in the week because of a back injury.

The unseeded players appeared content to keep the ball in play until one made an error. Dupont made fewer and thus walked away with the $6,000 top women's prize.

In men's doubles semi-final play Sunday, Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland and Bob Hewitt of South Africa defeated Victor Amaya and Hank Pfister of the U.S., 6-4, 6-7, 7-6 and Peter Fleming of the U.S. and McEnroe downed Marty Riessen and Sherwood Stewart of the U.S., 6-4, 6-3.

'Great thrill' for Renner

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — It all came down to a 10-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole.

At one time or another six men had led or shared the lead Sunday in the final round of the $400,000 Westchester tournament. But it came down to a difficult, nerve-testing putt on the final hole.

"I aimed for the middle of the hole and said a little prayer," Jack Renner said. "When it went in, I had a feeling I've been waiting for all of my life.

"I'm thrilled to death to win. It's a great thrill."

Australian David Graham, who tied for second behind Renner's brilliant birdie-par-birdie finish, enjoyed it almost as much as the 23-year-old Renner.

"He works very, very hard at his game," said Graham. "He's overdue to win. He is a very accomplished player."

Renner scored the first victory of his three-year PGA career with a closing 67 and a 277 total, seven strokes under par.

The victory was worth $72,000 to Renner, pushing his year's earnings to $174,281.

Little, who started Sunday's second round in a three-way tie, had a 36-hole score of 137 over the 6,156-yard, par-72 Plymouth course.

Dale Shaw of Victoria followed her opening-round 72 with a 71 Sunday and was six strokes back, while Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., shot a 71 for 149. Jocelyn Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., missed the cut with a 80-74—154 total.

It was one of Shaw's best starts since turning pro four years ago.

Little, who has three victories since joining the tour in 1971, has been in the top 10 of her last 10 tournaments. In that span, she's had two ties for second and a pair of fourths.

"This is my sixth consecutive tournament," Little said. "I feel really good. My game feels a lot more consistent this week."

The winner of the 54-hole tournament will receive $15,000. The original field of 89 professionals and five amateurs was cut to 61 pros who shot 151 or lower.

Morgan, Rutledge share third place

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Roger Klatt of St. Albert, Alta., shot a three-under-par 68 Sunday to coast to an eight-stroke win in the Simon Fraser men's golf tournament.

With earlier rounds of 65 and 70, Klatt finished the 54-hole tournament with a 10-under 203 and an easy victory over 27 other professional golfers.

Tom Whittle of Vancouver, 64-73-74 — 211, finished second while rookie Jim Rutledge and John Morgan, both of Victoria, tied for third at 212. Rutledge shot 68 Sunday while Morgan came in with a 69.

The top amateur was Steve Chapman of Prince George who tied at par 213 with Norm Jarvis of Vancouver. Mike Daly of Montreal, Steve Keeley of Sherwood Park, Alta., and Cec Ferguson, a former Victorian now living in Regina, tied at 214.

Klatt won $1,500.

Netherlands girls escape with victory over Canada

VANCOUVER — Perhaps fortunate to be undefeated and still rated as the tournament favorite, The Netherlands had a day of rest today and the opportunity to recover from a big scare in the opening round as play resumed today in the women's world field hockey championship.

Also among the teams without a match scheduled today was Canada, the squad that had the Dutch girls on the ropes and was unlucky to finish with worse than a tie in Saturday's tournament-opener.

Well-conditioned and determined, the Canadians weathered a few troublesome moments in the first half and were threatening to take command at times in the second half before a penalty corner gave Sieke Boekhorst the opportunity for her second goal of the game. That tally rescued the Netherlands, breaking a 1-1 deadlock and producing a 2-1 triumph in a hard-fought contest marked by injuries.

Sandy Dreever scored for Canada, which had one goal disallowed and barely missed on another attack when the ball rolled inches wide of a post with the Netherlamds goaltender far out of the net.

Dutch captain Maria Mattheussens was taken to hospital with a possible fractured nose after she collided with Canadian defender Shelley Winter of Victoria. Winter suffered a gash on her forehead that required five stitches.

Four of the other opening-day matches resulted in shutout victories.

Margaret Souyave of England scored six goals and clubmate Jane Swinnertyon added five to lead their team to an 18-0 rout of Zambia.

The 11th-seeded United States blanked third-seeded New Zealand 3-1 on goals from Karen Shelton, Beth Anders and Sheryl Johnson.

Jill MacNamara tallied three times to lead Australia to a 12-0 win over Fiji. Wales, led by Shirley Morgan with four goals, blanked Japan 7-0.

In the final game Saturday, Germany edged Scotland 2-1 on goals from Veronica Wolff and Gudren Neumann. Moira Kerr replied for Scotland.

Play continued today with New Zealand meeting Fiji, Wales taking on Zambia, Argentina playing Trinidad, Ireland testing Bermuda, Australia clashing with India and England battling Hong Kong.

Athletics drub Midnight club

Victoria Athletics mauled Nanaimo Midnight Auto 25-6 Sunday to sweep the best-of-three Vancouver Island senior "B" lacrosse championship playoff at Pearkes Arena.

Athletics now advance to the four-team, round-robin British Columbia championship that starts Friday in Vancouver.

Bill Marechek led A's with six goals and eight assists, Kevin Kennedy was six-and-five, Andy Reid added three-and-nine and Dwayne Ferguson was three-and-three.

Athletics won the opener Saturday 19-16 behind the marksmanship of Kennedy (7 and 5), Marechek (2 and 9) and Reid (2 and 6).

Szmidt second as record falls

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union clipped one-hundreth of a second off his world swimming record for the 400-metre freestyle Sunday with a time of 3:51.40.

Pete Szmidt of Edmonton set a Canadian record when he finished second to Salnikov in 3:56.31 at the Siviet-Canada dual meet.

OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM BELOW!

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

LETTERS FOR TODAY, GAME No. 5 ONLY

A F W

IMPORTANT!

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Not a usual race day

Instead, the likes of Irish Ojetsol, Spunkey Dale, Count Butler, Jocko Tomahawk, Jay Dee Axworthy, Buck N, Doc The Dauber and Banner Dundee stirred the racegoers at Saturday's harness program.

Masters' debut as the first woman to drive at this year's meet was delayed because of a balking Senga Lexie. The six-year-old, behaving like an anti-libber, refused to start the fourth race despite considerable persuasion.

Senga Lexie finally was led back to the stable and Linda had to wait another day before making her Vancouver Island driving debut.

But there was no lack of excitment during the 53rd day of the standardbred meet.

Whopping payoffs made the day most pleasant for the chosen few among a crowd of 1,415 fans.

It started in the third when outsiders Irish Ojetsol ($22 to win) and Spunkey Dale ($14.20 to place) finished 1-2 for a $224.60 exactor.

But the best was yet to come. Count Butler, overlooked because of poor performances in his last four outings, scored with youthful Dwayne Guest in the fifth to pay $74.40 and hooked up with second-place Northridge for a whopping $802.40 exactor.

It was the third highest payoff at Sandown this year.

The nose bettors hit another big one when Jocko Tomahawk won the sixth and paid $23.50.

The exactor bettors collected big payoffs in the seventh when the combination of Jay Dee Axworthy and Buck N paid $273.10 and in the tenth when Doc the Dauber and Banner Dundee returned $131.40 for a 1-2 finish.

Frustrated Whitecap defender takes it out on Dallas squad

By The Canadian Press

It's been a frustrating season for defender John Craven of Vancouver Whitecaps — until Saturday night.

Craven, in his second season with the Whitecaps, scored two goals 74 seconds apart to lead Vancouver into the second round of the North American Soccer League playoffs with a 2-1 decision over Dallas Tornado.

That gave the Whitecaps a sweep of the two-game series, thanks to a 3-2 win over the Tornado in Dallas last Wednesday.

Craven, who scored eight goals in 28 games last season, missed 18 games this year with leg injuries.

"I'm progressing and playing now like I did last year," he said. "I'm feeling more comfortable each game and finally getting into the right positions again.

"On the second goal, Dallas seemed to be a little flat-footed. I made a run, got half a yard on the defender and Alan (Ball) put the ball perfectly into open space."

The Tornado led 1-0 on Steve Pecher's goal in the 56th minute in an attempt to even the series.

Craven, who had one goal in 12 league games this year, brought the Vancouver crowd of 30,328 to its feet at 63:21 when he booted a shot passed Alex Stepney from 12 yards out during a wild scramble in front of the goalkeeper.

The game was played in occasional rain and the artificial surface was slick.

Other first-round playoff series also wound up in two straight. San Diego Sockers made it two in a row with a 7-2 verdict over California Surf and Chicago Sting swept Fort Lauderdale Strikers, winning 1-0 in the second game Saturday.

New York Cosmos blanked Toronto Blizzard 2-0, Tulsa edged Minnesota 2-1, Los Angeles nipped Washington 4-3 and Tampa Bay defeated Detroit 3-1 Sunday to complete their march into the second round.

At San Diego, before 10,225 fans, Hugo Sanchez scored twice to lead San Diego past California.

Karl-Heinz Granitza's unassisted goal at 29:55 gave Chicago its home-field win over Fort Lauderdale, advancing the Sting to the American Conference semi-final.

Sting goalie Tony Chursky has not allowed a goal in his last 405 minutes of play.

Weekend results:

Tulsa 2 Minnesota 1 (Tulsa wins two-game first-round series 2-0)
Los Angeles 4 Washington 3 (Los Angeles wins two-game, first-round series 2-0)

SATURDAY

San Diego 7 California 2 (San Diego wins two-game, first-round series 2-0)

Refugees take jobs Canadians won't

TORONTO (CP) — Indochinese refugees are having little trouble finding a variety of jobs without taking them away from Canadians, says a resettlement officer for the Canadian Employment and Immigration Commission in Toronto.

Austin Allan says the refugees are taking jobs the employment centre has had on file for a long time — jobs Canadians do not want.

"They are not high-paying jobs," he says. "Some of them are very dusty and dirty. We find the Vietnamese are quite willing to do them. They're not taking jobs away from Canadians."

Because only about 20 per cent of the refugees speak English, most are not out meeting the public yet. They are working as chambermaids, dishwashers and kitchen help, and training to work in trades.

Many are finding work through volunteer agencies. Diana Weatherall, from the volunteer organization Operation Lifeline, says a tremendous variety of jobs are being offered for anywhere from minimum wage to $5 an hour.

Allan says employers report the refugees are excellent, hard-working employees.

Baby slain in icy river plunge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A dead baby, apparently thrown to its death, was pulled from the Fraser River Sunday night and police say a second baby might have drowned.

Police officials were meeting today to decide whether circumstances indicate that a second infant was involved.

Police were tipped by a telephone caller who said a person standing on the sandy bank of the river was seen throwing two objects into the water.

By time police arrived, a fisherman living on his boat had already recovered the body of a one-year-old boy.

Sgt. Bob Desmarais of Vancouver city police said the fisherman apparently heard a splash near his boat.

The baby was identified but police did not release his name.

Police said the baby's father was questioned early today and a search was continuing for the child's mother.

Fire department divers, a Coast Guard hovercraft and fishermen searched for a second body until about 1 a.m. PDT. The search was called off because of the darkness, current and murkiness of the Fraser.

Desmarais said boats in the area were warned of the incident which occurred at the foot of Fraser St., an industrial area on the south side of the city.

Police were also asking anyone who was in the vicinity Sunday night to contact them.

Desmarais said the river's current could carry a body past the mouth of the river, less than 10 kilometres away, into the Strait of Georgia.

'Miracle' stumble restores sight

OTTAWA (CP) — After almost eight years of blindness, Bob Aubrey tripped over his dog last week and suddenly regained his sight.

"It's a miracle," said Aubrey, 50, whose loss of vision was diagnosed as Lebere's optic disease, a hereditary condition from which his brother also suffers.

Aubrey fell over his dog Buttons and hit his head on the floor while he was making his way across the living room to let in two men who were to paint his apartment.

"It didn't hit me right away," he said. But on opening the door, Aubrey said he actually saw the two men.

"It is really hard to describe how I felt. I suddenly started sweating and got goose-bumps all over my body. It was just an incredible feeling, actually kind of scary."

Aubrey said he promptly called his doctor.

"I went and saw him but he couldn't explain it," he said, adding that six years ago he regained his sight for a few weeks.

"They couldn't explain it then and they can't explain it now."

Now he must learn again how to live with sight.

"I still find myself checking the level in a tea cup by sticking my finger in it or I put my hand out in front of me when I walk."

Now you can enjoy the Sebastiani family tradition.

Our Sebastiani family vineyards are the oldest in Northern California. The first grapes were planted here in 1825. Today, the third generation of Sebastianis continues our family's heritage of quality and dedication to old world wine-making skills.

My father August (like his father before him) won't have it any other way. Aware of the importance of care and time, he insists we make our wines in the unhurried, traditional way. Sebastiani wines are softened and mellowed in redwood casks, then aged to the peak of maturity in the cool, even temperatures of our limestone cellars. We know that the degree of maturity and the method by which it is reached makes the difference between good wine and great wine; over the years, many of our wines have won gold and silver medals in national and international competitions.

Sebastiani Mountain Burgundy and Sebastiani Mountain Chablis are two wines my father is especially proud of. He calls them the "Sebastiani family's contribution to fine dining, in the style of the French country wines." People seem to agree because they're our two most popular wines.

May we share the Sebastiani family tradition of premium quality and excellent value with you? Look for Sebastiani Mountain Chablis and Sebastiani Mountain Burgundy. We introduce them with pride and confidence, and we think you'll enjoy them.

CHAIN REACTION: Saturday was overcast and rainy but nobody got wetter than escape artist Lee Shilo of Victoria. Last April Shilo, a modern-day Harry Houdini, jumped off the Johnson Street bridge and escaped underwater from a straightjacket. Saturday he leaped into 23 feet of murky Inner Harbor water shackled by a 20-pound ball and chain. Victoria police constable Alan Barron, with an assist from Gene Burlock, makes sure the chains are secure (left photo) before Shilo goes overboard (centre photo). But 30 seconds later he surfaces (top right), free of his fetters. Helped back on board (bottom right), Shilo shrugs and smiles as if there were nothing to it. (John McKay photos).

Fog-shrouded ferry nearly runs aground

The ferry Bowen Queen came close to running aground halfway out of fog-shrouded Fulford Harbour this morning.

A passenger told the Times a grounding was averted when a hurried full-speed astern order was given.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman said only that the thick fog was to blame for the incident and that there was no damage to the ship.

The only other ferry affected by this morning's fog was the one between Brentwood and Mill Bay which has no radar and missed her first sailings. She was in service by mid-morning, however.

There was no interruption in service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen although there were delays of two to three hours because of the absence of the Queen of Alberni, laid up after running aground in Active Pass.

Salt Spring Island commuters for the 6:45 a.m. sailing from Fulford Harbour watched wide-eyed as the Bowen Queen's bow propeller churned and the water turned brown, an indication of how shallow the harbor is at that point and how close the ferry had come to running aground.

The excitement wasn't over with the near grounding, however. With visibility severely limited and the ferry's foghorn blowing regularly, the ferry turned into Gosse Channel, between Piers and Knapp islands just off Swartz Bay.

It was at that point that the red channel marker came into view, too late for evasive action. The ferry's port bow slammed into it. There was no apparent damage as the large buoy floated clear along the port side.

Controls on boat builders?

Saanich Ald. Sandy Noel wants council to establish controls over private boat building on residential property.

Backyard boat builders should be required to take out permits, Noel says in a letter to council.

Residents have complained their neighborhoods suffer from long-term boat building projects, he says.

"It is not suggested that the municipality inhibit the enthusiasm of private boat or yacht building but that some measure of control be instituted to protect neighbors from what may develop into a five- or six-year program," the letter states.

Noel suggests permits be issued at little or no cost by the municipal inspection department before an outdoor boat-building program starts.

Police-fire move urged in Saanich

A space shortage facing Saanich fire and police departments won't be solved by a $250,000 addition to the existing complex, says municipal administrator William Tremayne.

Tremayne is recommending both departments move into a nearby building now shared by Saanich, the Capital Region District and the provincial health ministry.

The health ministry's lease expires in September and will not be renewed by the provincial government.

If the police board agrees the move is a good idea, the municipality could start discussions with the CRD, Tremayne suggests in a letter to council.

A preliminary cost estimate indicates expansion of the police-fire complex would cost at least $250,000.

But any such addition would provide only for the present needs of the fire department and is inadequate for the police department.

At Tremayne's request, the police and fire chiefs have just completed reports on their needs projected to the year 2000 and based on a Saanich population of 120,000.

Fire Chief Art Fryer believes the space now occupied by the health and welfare department plus several rooms used by the CRD would take care of expansion needs for the department.

Moving equipment and minor alterations would cost between $5,000 and $7,000, he estimates.

Police Chief Bob Peterson told Tremayne in his report that moving into the health building is only a partial solution to his space problems.

Only portions of the department could be moved there and it is a better idea to keep the entire police operation under one roof, he said.

However, Tremayne points out that the police department needs 6,738 square feet of space right now and the health and welfare building could provide more than 7,000 square feet of space on one floor.

Firemen injured in crash

Two Victoria firemen were among three people injured when an emergency car crashed responding to what turned out to be a malfunctioning alarm Sunday morning.

Police said a station wagon driven north on Wharf by fireman Robert W. Young, 30, was in collision with a car driven east on Johnson by Ellen M. Griffin, 73, of 713 Cairn.

Young and acting assistant chief Daniel O'Connell, 52, a passenger in the fire vehicle, were treated at Victoria General Hospital for bruises and neck injuries, and Griffin for face cuts.

The fire department said the station wagon had slowed and stopped in the intersection with siren sounding and the other driver mistook it for the lift span warning on the nearby Johnson Street bridge.

Counselling for dropouts

The Greater Victoria School District today opened a temporary counselling service for teen-age dropouts who want to return to the classroom.

The advisory service for dropouts will be available until Thursday between 9 a.m. and noon, district counsellor Tom Hueston said.

Experienced counsellors will talk to former students on the telephone or set up personal interviews, he said.

The service — called Drop Back — is an administrative experiment to see if easing the transition from the outside world to the classroom will encourage more dropouts to return to school.

"Once you're out, it's difficult to get back in. It's hard to get in the front door," Hueston said.

Assistant superintendent Court Brousson had to ask school board permission in May because the move meant a major change of policy.

But the administation wants to keep track of students who leave school early and offer them help if they decide to return to school.

Legally, the board has no control over the actions of dropouts over 16 years of age.

"That hasn't been discussed yet," he said.

Interested teen-agers should call 592-1211 if they wish to use the service.

Q. Please tell me where I can write to the Greenpeace organization about the Save the Whales campaign? Also the comedian Gallagher? I know he is closely connected with the campaign. J.R.

A. The Greenpeace address is: Greenpeace Foundation, 207-1929 Douglas, Victoria. The phone number is 385-1011. If you write the National Broadcasting Company's public relations office at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, New York, U.S.A., 10020, they will give you the address of Gallagher's agent.

Q. I've been told chow dogs can have blue coats. Is it true? D.P.

A. Yes. The coats can be black, red, yellow, blue or white but coats should all be of one color to be purebred.

On the beach always something to do

NORTH BY OUR HOUSE, the beach is stony. But south a couple of hundred yards, the sands begin. Tawny and inviting on these warm summer days, they undulate down to a silken sea.

The sands constitute a separate world. Adults may bask and drowse like seals under the beneficent sun, but for the daily swarm of children, it's a busy world. There's always something doing, some project to be accomplished with infinite toil and limitless enthusiasm.

Year by year, new generations of children build sand castles. Often these are both imaginative and elaborate, with walls and towers, moats and once even an ingeniously-contrived portcullis that rose and descended at the twitch of a string.

They are studies in impermanence, these castles. The flooding tide invades them and they melt away. But while building them, the kids are completely absorbed and happy, given over to the magic of creation.

But sand castles are mostly for the small fry. Boys of a certain age and stage turn to raft-building as if in answer to some prompting of nature.

The beach is wonderfully kind to prospective raftmakers. It supplies drift logs in plenty, in a variety of sizes from small and skinny to large and seemingly immovable. The inexhaustible warehouse of the beach also dispenses scraps of planking in useful widths and lengths, poles with the bark conveniently abraded away, and even rusted nails that can be bashed free with a rock and painfully straightened.

It is a study in applied industry to watch a couple of boys building a raft.

It also sheds light on some of man's more impressive endeavors, such as the raising of Stonehenge and the construction of the pyramids.

A pair of raft-intent boys will tackle the impossible without a second thought. And frequently, they bring it to pass. Shouts of triumph as that "seemingly immovable" log is levered with labor infinite from its nest and rolled into the sea!

Rafts tend to be safe. Their very shakiness condemns their riders to reasonably shallow waters. Not so the air mattresses and truck inner tubes on which some children go to sea.

These engender boldness. They tempt non-swimmers too far off shore, into an area of outward-setting currents which run with treacherous strength.

Last time Win and I went salmon fishing, we happened on two kids afloat on air mattresses well out beyond the kelp beds.

"Want us to tow you in?" I called.

The near mattress-rider shook his head. Then, as if to reassure us, he hollered back, "We can swim."

Still, we kept the two in sight, and were relieved when they paddled back inside the sheltering kelp.

Most children need only to be exposed to a beach to occupy themselves happily with its infinite diversity. But at rare intervals, an exception to the rule turns up.

We were strolling the sands on a blistering day a week or two ago when we came on a little boy sitting on a drift log. He was sifting sand with his toes, and on his face was a settled frown.

His mother called to him from where she nested with beach towel and sun-glasses among the upper logs:

"Why don't you go and play?"

His answer, which we found pathetic:

"Aw, there's nothing to do."

Perhaps the child was so citified that he could only regard a stretch of untrammelled beach as a bore. Or perhaps he was merely one of those unfortunately dull children who grow into stuffy adults.

Scribbling fine retirement project

Scribbling has been a passion with me since my earliest days. So a bias towards putting words to paper as a satisfying retirement project is not surprising.

But you do not need a background of work with typewriter and printing press to enjoy writing in your senior years. Nor need you produce the great Canadian novel, an epic poem or get into any money-making activity to experience the joys of researching a subject of special interest to you and then producing something in word and, perhaps, picture form.

The contents of your publication and its quality need please only you although there is increased gratification, of course, if others find your production praiseworthy.

Some seniors find that writing a family history is a good retirement chore. Dig into the background of your ancestors, putting down stories told by older members of your clan while they are still around. Search out old letters, pictures and negatives from albums, attics, shoe-boxes, cupboards and drawers.

Many retired folk take a nostalgic trip to their old home country or the part of the world where their parents or grandparents lived. Here is an opportunity to get earlier history of your family.

Incidentally, such a project may be of value well beyond your family circle should you wish to make it available at some later date (in your will, say); national, provincial and local archives are eager to get stories and pictures of earlier times.

Some of us have kept a regular journal most of our lives. If you have, keep it up for you will continue to derive benefits from writing things down. You will find it encourages you to plan active days, helps to sort out what really is important and puts trivial things in proper perspective.

Some of you already are embarked on ambitious writing programs. Margaret Grant, Toronto music teacher, has used her senior years to produce a book titled Your Child and the Piano. She tells me the title applies to grandchildren, too, and offers the interesting, helpful book at a special price to seniors. Write me for details.

Bill Williscroft of Calgary sends me a copy of Across All Boundaries in which he puts to paper his philosophy of life; Florence Cripps, St. Catharines, Ont., sends me a copy of Origins, in which her poetry appears and says she is workng on a book of her own; 71-year-old Harry Rotenberg, Toronto, writes booklets which sell and has produced over 100 songs; Margaret Nix, Oshawa, sends me Rambling Rhymes and Reveries by Frank G. Light (her father), who produced publishable material into his 80s; Grace Lerner sends me Voice of Alumni produced regularly by the Creative Writing Group of Holy Blossom Temple Alumni with all contributors over the age of 59.

Many of you write regularly for your national, provincial and local seniors magazines and newspapers. Sometimes it's a chore; but it is satisfying, isn't it?

Recent studies have shown that diabetes is not a problem in poor countries. However, in affluent countries like Canada where food is plentiful, diabetes ranks as the third highest cause of death. The Canadian Diabetic Association advises that weight control through sensible eating is the easiest way to avoid the symptoms of this disease.

The most common diabetes symptoms are conntinuing thirst, weight loss, blurred vision and fatigue. A simple urine test is often all that is required to confirm the presence of diabetes. Once a person has acquired this diseae, there is no cure. By following some simple rules, though, a diabetic can keep himself in good health.

Teenager tips on parenthood

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl and have put down on paper what my friends (boys, too) think are some good "Do's and Don'ts for Parents." If you think they are worth printing, a lot of teenagers will thank you.

LOYAL FAN

DEAR FAN: Your "Do's and Don't for Parents" are well worth the space in my column. Here they are:

— Don't ever search your kid's room while he is at school, work, etc.

— Don't choose their friends for them.

— Don't read their diary or personal letters, etc.

— Don't give your child's things to another child without checking with the owner first.

— If you're divorced, don't ask your child why they love the other parent, or try to talk him out of loving the other one.

— Don't ever tell your kid that if he's not satisfied with the situation at home he can pack his bags and go.

— If your child is adopted, don't tell him that, if he doesn't behave, you will send him back.

— Don't always make them take a "tag-along" (younger brother or sister) wherever they go.

— Don't embarrass them by putting them down in public or in front of friends.

— Don't keep telling them how hard things were when you were a kid.

— Don't call them names. That really hurts a kid.

— Don't yell at a smaller kid, or hit him because he dropped, spilled or broke something. Nine times out of 10 it was an accident and he's already sorry for doing it.

— If you are having an argument, let your kid talk, too.

— O tell them you are sorry, or that you make a mistake once in a while. (Nobody's perfect. Not even parents.)

— DO hug your kid and tell him in words that you love him.

DEAR ABBY: We also had the problem of loud music at our house. My parents used to complain that my stereo was too loud. They were of another generation and didn't understand that rock and disco have to be played loud or they're not effective.

My grandmother solved the problem last Christmas when she bought me a stereo headset! Now I can turn up my stereo at high volumes without disturbing anybody. Pass this along.

MICKY

DEAR MICKY: Wearing a headset may protect other eardrums from being assaulted, but what about your own? Audiologists (specialists who test hearing) inform me that they are now seeing an alarming number of people with serious hearing impairment due to constant exposure to loud music.

DEAR ABBY: How does one address mail to a husband and wife who are both doctors?

MRS.J.F.

DEAR MRS. F.: Address mail to Drs. John and Jane Doe.

Note the unusual octogonal shape of window in this vacation home

Think rustic for cottages

By PAULINE GRAVES

A vacation home represents relaxation through a total change in environment, both indoors and out. The setting, mountains, beach or rural living, and this alone broadens one's perspective.

It follows then, that with a different setting the house, cottage or cabin should have interiors that contrast slso with city living.

Shown here is just such a house, by designer Cary Smoot which is totally rustic. Native materials, wood and stone, are used wherever possible, and used in a casual, informal style that is warm and welcoming.

Boulders and rocks found on the property outline the fire area and line the wall behind. The fireplace itself is as much like an open fire as is safely possible. Instead of being recessed in the wall, the fireplace is a 15-inch-high platform that juts into the room from a 10-inch recess.

A large iron hood, two inches thick, embrace the platform, but leave a 12-inch opening in front for access to the fire. These slabs not only provide seating, but function as tables as well. Under the octagonal window there is additional seating space in an L-shape bench that lines the wall and then turns towards the room's centre.

YOUR HEALTH

Heart attacks hurt more than hearts

My husband had a heart attack six months ago. He is back at work, but not a moment of the day goes by that he doesn't refer, in some way, to his heart attack. How do we help him to stop dwelling on his heart attack and break away from the restrictions he imposes on himself? — Mrs. G. K.

DEAR MRS. K.:

A heart attack is a shattering experience. In a single moment, a forceful, dynamic personality is converted into an incapacitated invalid. The sudden impact of such a medical catastrophe can affect any person at every social, economic and intellectual level.

Have your noticed how frequently men who have recovered from a heart attack refer back to it almost as if it were a milestone in their lives? And, indeed, it is. They sometimes say, "When I had my heart attack in 1972, etc."

It is sometimes difficult for those who surround a heart victim to realize the intensity of this emotional experience.

At first, it is also difficult for the coronary patient to adjust himself to the fact that this stunning disaster should have struck him. When the pain and anxiety are alleviated with intensive care, recovery is on the way. At this early stage, it is imperative that the physical and emotional rehabilitation must begin if he is to be returned to society as a productive human being.

Liberating the patient from the fears of becoming a permanent cardiac invalid is an artistic endeavor for the family and doctors. Some patients recover completely from their physical heart attacks, but persist in being emotional cardiac cripples because of their anxiety.

It takes a great deal of patience and understanding to wean a coronary patient away from dependence on doctors, the family and their ultra-solicitude. But it can be done.

With gentle persuasion and reassurance, by you and your husband's doctors, your husband will be emancipated from the yoke of fear that is such a burden to him.

Engine-swap plan unlikely to pay off

DEAR MIKE:
My 1975 GMC 4x4 pickup gets only 11-12 kilometres per gallon in town and 21 km/g on the highway. A friend told me that the reason my fuel mileage is so low is because the 350-inch V-8 is basically inefficient. I've also been told to put a 1963-67 Chevy 327 V-8 in this truck — that I could then expect 19 km/g in town and 29-30 km/g on the road. Could you comment, please? — BARELY MAKING IT

DEAR BARELY:
By "inefficient," I think you mean the engine has a lot of built-in emissions equipment that keeps it from getting optimum gas mileage. Well, that's true to some extent, but I don't believe a pre-catalytic-converter engine will boost your km/g to the figure you mention. You'll probably end up somewhere in between and I feel the benefit isn't worth the expense of swapping engines.

DEAR MIKE:
My 1973 Hornet has rusty water in the radiator. I've flushed the cooling system numerous times, but the water is still rusty. Can you tell me how to get the rust out?— RUSTY

DEAR RUSTY:
I wouldn't worry too much about it — rusty water doesn't really hurt anything. Flakes of rust yes, but rusty water no. I do recommend flushing the cooling system once a year, preferably in the fall, and at that time you ought to put in a mixture of at least 50/50 antifreeze and water. But don't let rusty water alone bother you.

DEAR MIKE:
My 1965 Volkswagen bus has an annoying habit of grinding while downshifting into second gear. However, after I drive for 20 minutes or so, the grinding goes away. What causes it? — RRRRRRRRRR

DEAR RRRRRRRR:
Probably a worn second-gear synchronizer. As your transmission lubricant warms up and thins out, the synchronizer apparently does its job. Grinding could eventually ruin your gear teeth. But since the repair tends to be expensive, and as the problem occurs only part of the time, I simply wouldn't downshift to second until everything warms up.

Rub is dad's having kittens

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Here kitty, kitty.

That's 19 kitties too many for 15-year-old Laurie Collier, who has been ordered by her father to find homes for 19 of the family's 27 cats. But that's not many, really, compared with the 97 cats the family owned at one time.

Miss Collier said she can't blame her father. "I guess when there's not enough room to sit down, there's too many," she said philosophically.

The teenager lives with her parents, three brothers, a sister, a hamster, several dogs, a few guppies, two rats and the cats in a "nice big house" here. The large collection of felines began when the Colliers adopted 27 kittens — all at one time.

"We had a cat that died about a year ago," she said. ". . . A week later my mother and I went to the SPCA together and we just fell in love with all of them. We adopted the 27 kittens they were going to put to sleep."

There were other trips to other shelters. When the number grew to 97, neighbors and friends helped relieve the burden. A local radio station has agreed to help in the giveaway.

How does a family cope with a house full of meows and fur?

"We have 11 litter boxes upstairs and downstairs and we change them two and three times a day," Miss Collier said.

Infant brains cells 'more plugged in' than adults' are

CHICAGO (NYT) - The child may not be smarter than the man, but he has a more complex set of connections between his brain cells, according to the findings of a pediatric neurologist at the University of Chicago. Through studies with the electron microscope, Dr. Peter Huttenlocher showed that children between the ages of one and two have about 50 per cent more synapses per cubic millimetre in the cortex, or thinking area, of the brain.

The synapse is a connection between cells of the nervous system. Theoretically, the more such connections, the more pieces of information the brain is able to process. Although it has long been thought that the density of synapses increases with age, the new findings indicate that just the opposite is true, with the number diminishing after the age of two.

Huttenlocher, who published his findings in a recent issue of the journal Brain Research, suggested that the superabundancy of synapses in the infant brain may explain why such children often recover from brain injuries more fully than adults do. "If a child has a severe injury to the speech areas of the brain, the child will recover his speech within a few days," he said, but an adult with the same injury may become permanently speechless.

White Rock spray job railroaded

WHITE ROCK (CP) — Angry local residents say a United States railway failed to notify them when it sprayed herbicide on blackberry bushes along its tracks.

One resident has posted her own signs to warn berry pickers that Burlington Northern Railway had Tordon 101 sprayed on the bushes last Friday. The company says it never posts warning signs on its property.

The herbicide is designed to retard plant growth along the right-of-way which runs between the main street and the beach in this seaside community about 50 kilometres southeast of Vancouver.

But residents are worried about potential health problems. Environmental consultant Merriam Doucet said it is a proven cause of cancer and birth defects.

"We use sprays to kill foliage all the time," said David H. Burns, Burlington Northern's superintendant of operations, in a telephone interview from Denver, Colo..

"Why the hell don't they stay off our property anyway? They're lucky we didn't use soil-sterilent pellets. They would get everything in sight."

Pamela Brendon, who first noticed the spraying while jogging, said the area is a local favorite for berry pickers.

"People are still picking the berries without knowledge that the spraying took place," she said in an interview Sunday after putting up her own signs to warn pickers.

She said that local parks board officials denied the spraying when she phoned them Friday and were unaware it had occurred but they verified it later in the day.

White Rock officials said they don't know why they were not warned about the spraying. A parks board official and an alderman interviewed Sunday did not know what herbicide was used.

Alderman John Blewett said he was unable to come up with much information after several calls, but suspects soil-sterilent pellets have been used although it has not been confirmed.

"Burlington Northern officials are not programmed for any meaningful response," he said.

Don Kayne, railway master in Vancouver, said he was "unaware of the spraying" but added that there is nothing new in railways spraying along tracks to control growth of weeds and bushes.

Kayne said some signs were posted in the area some time ago, but he didn't know what was on them.

Rick Johnson, owner of Western Weed Control, the company that did the spraying, first said no spraying had been done, then said only alder and maple trees had been sprayed with Tordon 101.

A consultant for the ministry of environment said the railway has a year-round permit for spraying and that the allowable concentration means that harm would come only to those who ate at least 150 pounds of blackberries.

Doucet, a self-taught authority on herbicides and pesticides who now lectures at universities, disagreed.

"Tordon 101 is 80 per cent 2,4-D and 20 per cent Picloram," he said. "Picloram is the worse of the two herbicides.

"The National Cancer Institute admitted that small doses over a long period of time will cause six kinds of cancer, chronic renal disease and abnormal growth, not to mention birth defects," he said.

Twiggy just loves Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The year was 1966 and she was the darling of Carnaby Street, London's trendy avenue of chic boutiques, smart restaurants, outrageous fashions, drugs and the driving beat of rock.

Her name was Twiggy. She was a skinny, flat-chested, 92-pound model, a symbol of art deco, a 16-year-old celebrity cover girl in microminiskirt with cropped blonde hair and long black eyelashes.

The Beatles were riding high. Designer Mary Quant was the last word. The Rolling Stones were the despair of the establishment.

British movies were the rage at home and abroad. Carnaby Street was the place to be, the nucleus of a curious sub-culture which radiated ultra-hip across the channel to Europe and spanned the Atlantic to the colonies.

Today, 13 years later, Carnaby Street is a decaying boulevard, a rip-off attraction for tourists as seedy as Times Square and Hollywood Boulevard.

It's all over now — except Twiggy. She's no longer a model. She doesn't visit Carnaby Street anymore.

Twiggy is 29, the wife of actor Michael Whitney. She's the mother of an eight-month-old daughter, Carly dubbed "Twiglet" by London papers — and she just purchased a home in the Hollywood hills overlooking Sunset Boulevard.

TWIGGY
. . . at 'Twiglet's' birth

Twiggy has turned to acting, recently completing a new movie co-starring her husband, There Goes The Bride.

She weighs 114 pounds. Her hair is darker and long. Her eyelashes are a conventional length and without mascara. But Twiggy is as vivacious as she was in her days as an international oddity.

Her North London accent is as crashingly foreign to American ears as it was to London's Mayfair toffs. And, she says, she's never been happier.

"Those old times were great fun," Twiggy said. "The whole world was focused on England for some obscure reason. It became fashionable to be in London with the screaming maniacs of music, the fashions and the drugs.

"My name was Lesley Armstrong and I was enjoying a happy childhood. When I became Twiggy and I became famous, I loved it. They paid me $30 an hour to pose for magazines and a great deal more for advertisements and endorsements.

"I travelled all over Europe and earned a great deal of money. I frittered away most of it. But I did buy a house for my parents which I still own. It was the best investment I ever made.

"When the dam burst, I was a bit low on funds, but never really desperately broke. I'm still comfortably fixed, thanks to a business manager I hired in 1970."

Scott's World
By Vernon Scott

Twiggy left modelling to star in The Boyfriend in 1971, a modestly successful movie followed by a bomb titled W in 1973. But on that picture she met Whitney with whom she lived before their marriage in 1977.

She starred in her own musical variety show for 2½ years on British TV, salting away her devaluating pounds. She acted in the theatre and cut a couple of record albums which sold briskly in England and Europe.

"Now it is time for me to move on," Twiggy said, daintily dispatching a noonday salad in the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills hotel.

"The name Twiggy works for me and against me. I might never have become famous without it. Perhaps I'd have settled down, married a working class English lad in Neasden and had six kids.

"Maybe I'd have been happier. But there's no way of knowing. I'm super-happy right now and, of course, having travelled and worked and associated with wealthy and famous people, I could never go back.

"I've lost contact with most of the people I knew when I was a model and Carnaby Street was the rage. But Michael and I count Linda and Paul McCartney among our closest friends. We visit with them often.

"Instead of staying in hotels we decided to buy our first house in California. Anyhow, I wanted to provide a proper home for Carly. Becoming a mother is the most exciting thing in my life.

"I hope to make a career of acting in films but not at the cost of my child and husband. It would be nice to work about a third of each year.

"Now it's up to me to prove I'm an actress, not the old Twiggy. She's gone, along with Carnaby Street. And the truth of it is, I'm glad."

Composer Surdin dies at 65

TORONTO (CP) — Composer-arranger Morris Surdin, 65, whose work included more than 3,000 radio dramas and stage presentations, died Sunday after suffering a heart attack at his home.

Surdin, who arranged music for Percy Faith's orchestra in the 1930s, was admired for his talent not only as a composer but as an arranger and conductor as well.

He arranged many of the musical scores for CBC radio dramas in the 1950s.

Surdin also wrote the score for Hospital, a 1970 film starring George C. Scott, and wrote for orchestras and other muscial groups throughout his career.

WASHINGON (AP) — La Scala, often hailed as the world's greatest opera company, has cancelled its fall tour of the United States primarily because of the Italian government's financial problems.

The troupe was scheduled to perform at the Kennedy Centre Sept. 22-24, prior to a tour of five U.S. cities.

Treat yourself to one of the several different facial treatments now available at the MARGO BEAUTY STUDIO in the Shelbourne Plaza . . . Facial, with massage; deep pore cleansing; light facial peeling.
 A thorough cleansing.
 Ozone treatment with the NEMECTRON VAPORISATOR.
WOOD LAMP
In a darkened room invisible rays produce an image on the skin which, with the incorporated magnifier, enables the trained Esthetician to more quickly identify the characteristics of the skin with great clarity, and thus make an accurate diagnosis. Included with every facial treatment.
NEMECTRON VAPORISATOR
Like the lungs, the skin absorbs oxygen and eliminates carbon dioxide. This respiration destines the entire condition of the skin; its health, vigour, elasticity and tone. The Vaporisator treatment vitalizes and activates the skin, clears the complexion, opens clogged pores, renews the skin cells and helps in removing many skin blemishes. It's a children's TV show; ask the director!

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Another local television program is about to begin in Lethbridge — with a difference.

The directors, cameramen, audio technicians — even the fidgety hosts — are all children. None is older than 13; some are only nine.

Eight Lethbridge youngsters are involved in creative TV through a project called Kids View Television, which began in April at Cablevision's community Channel 12 studio.

Cable 12 director Don Marshall and two assistants coached the group through its first program, an hour-long phone-in show with a city policeman and an RCMP officer as guests.

But the assistance was for the first show only because, as Marshall says, "the first show's always the worst — there are so many little things in TV that can go wrong."

Kids View Television is a Marshall brainchild that actually started in Penticton, when he was communnity channel director there.

Each time the hosts poured themselves a drink, it created a loud racket that sent the young TV crew into fits of laughter.

Opening lead — three of spades.

The opening lead often has a crucial effect on the outcome of a deal. But even when a defender does find the best lead, he may still have to follow it up perfectly to exploit his initial advantage.

Here is a classic illustration of a good opening lead combined later with a good follow-up lead. The deal occurred in the Life Masters Pair championship in 1969.

Meyer Schleifer, well-known Los Angeles star, elected to tee off with a low spade, even though North had bid the suit. Had Schleifer chosen the routine opening lead of a club, South would easily have made the contract.

Declarer followed low from dummy, hoping that Schleifer had led from the J-9 of spades or from either one of them. But East won the trick with the nine of spades and shifted to a low club at trick two.

South made the normal play of the jack of clubs, which lost to West's queen. Now Schleifer barefacedly underled the A-K of spades again! Declarer covered West's four of spades with dummy's ten, this time losing the trick to East's jack.

East then played a third round of spades, permitting Schleifer to cash his A-K. West next led a low club to his partner's ace and South went down two on a hand where practically all the other North-South declarers in notrump finished with either nine or ten tricks.

Schleifer's underlead of the A-K of spades at trick three was clearly the right play, since declarer was practically certain to misgauge the actual situation. However, the lay required both imagination and cunning, and these are traits with which all experts are well endowed.

"Crazy about them! But so many," his wife replied. "They must have cost a lot."

How many had he bought?

Chinese Catholics nip tie try

ROME (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church in China today welcomed the invitation from Pope John Paul to re-establish relations with the Vatican, broken when the Communists took power in 1949, the Italian news agency ANSA reported. But it set conditions likely to be unacceptable to the Vatican.

An ANSA dispatch from Peking said a spokesman for the Peking Patriotic Catholic Association, an independent body which runs the church in China, welcomed the pontiff's offer during his weekly Sunday appearance.

However, the spokesman said the Vatican would have to guarantee its "full independence" and revise a 1957 decree condemning the association's links with China's Communist government.

The spokesman gave an indication of what he meant by independence. ANSA said he accused the Vatican of "blatant interference" in the Chinese church when it said that the association's election of Msgr. Michael Fu Tieshan two weeks ago to be bishop of Peking was "illegitimate,."

The Pope, speaking out for the first time on China, told the Sunday crowd at his summer palace in Castel Gandolfo that the Vatican is prepared "to take every possible means" to restore the "perfect union" that once existed between it and the Chinese church.

Another stumbling block to the restoration of relations is the Vatican's diplomatic relations with the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan, where there are 300,000 Roman Catholics. China has made it clear that the Vatican, like other countries, must break off formal relations with Taiwan to establish relations with China.

Sources said the Vatican might be willing to make some concession on this point, possibly along the lines followed by the United States in January when it shifted its embassy from Taipei to Peking and set up unofficial relations with Taiwan.

Mugabe, Nkomo agree to talks

DAR ES SALAAM (Reuter) — The Patriotic Front guerrilla movement today accepted a British invitation to attend an all-party conference in London on the future of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, British diplomats said.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, prime minister of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, has already accepted British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's invitation to attend the conference, planned for September 10.

Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front, left Dar es Salaam today after formulating a joint approach to the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace plan agreed upon in Lusaka, Zambia, earlier this month by Commonwealth countries.

The attendance of both men at next month's conference in London is seen as vital for the success of the meeting.

Mugabe heads the Zimbabwe African National Union based in Mozambique and Nkomo is leader of the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union based in Zambia.

They did not meet with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, the chairman of the so-called frontline states supporting the guerrillas. Officials sources said that he spent the weekend resting at his home village of Butiama in the north.

Costa Rica expells Soviet diplomats

SAN JOSE (UPI) — President Rodrigo Carazo ordered the expulsion of three Soviet diplomats Sunday as renewed labor rioting injured hundreds in Limon.

In a nationwide television and radio address Sunday night, Carazo ordered the the first and second secretaries and the cultural attache of the Soviet Embassy to leave Costa Rica immediately.

The three Russians were identified as Yuri Chernish, 41, first secretary; Alexander Mordovets, 32, second secretary; and his wife, Olga Mordovets, cultural attache.

Three surviving tots improved

NAPLES (AP) — Doctors today reported a slight improvement in the condition of the three surviving octuplets born to a childless Naples woman but they said it is too early to say whether they will make it out of their incubators.

"They have had no breathing problem for almost two days and the skin of all three now has turned from bluish to a healthier pink," said Dr. Salvatore Jannuzzi, one of the physicians in charge of the three baby girls at St. Paul's Hospital.

"The parents, however, are still pessimistic and we doctors refrain from giving them any illusion. The babies are seriously underweight and it takes a lot of time to pronounce them out of danger."

Silvana, Anna and Valentina are the only survivors of the five girls and three boys born two months prematurely to Pasqualina Chianese, 29, on Thursday. One infant died 10 hours after birth, two died on Friday and two on Saturday.

Mrs. Chianese, who had been taking fertility drugs and lost sextuplets six years ago, is still in bed at the Hospital of the Incurable in another part of Naples and has not seen her children since their birth.

The father, Stefano, a 32-year-old insurance company employee, has been shuttling between the two hospitals.

Valentina has been the livelier of the three surviving octuplets but Jannuzzi said that Silvana and Anna also have started crying and moving more often. The infants now weigh between 26 and 27 ounces each, down more than one-tenth from their weight at birth.

On Sunday the doctors started feeding them milk though nasal tubes.

309 IN MEMORIAM

SOVENKO - Ruth Doreen, August 19, 1977.

Her loving face I hope to see again,
Though the days have passed away;
Sleep on, dear wife, and take your rest,
They miss you most who loved you best.
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all;
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance,
dear of you.

Sadly missed by her husband Matt, daughter Debra, son Peter Jr., George Christie, brothers Gerald, Gordon and Donald and sister Jean all of Montreal, also by her mother in-law, Mrs. Pauline Holak and sister in-law, Phyllis Herbert, both of Victoria.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

HALLAM — Donald R., passed away August 19, 1977.

God saw the road was getting rough and the hills were hard to climb so he closed your weary eyes and

Iceland arrests 'Peace vessel

LONDON (AP) — The Icelandic coast guard boarded the Greenpeace organization's anti-whaling ship Rainbow Warrior and towed it to Reykjavik on Sunday, spokesmen for the Vancouver-based ecology group reported.

The Rainbow Warrior had been interfering with an Icelandic whaling vessel in the Atlantic Ocean southwest of Iceland before the boarding Saturday night, Greenpeace spokesman Tony Marriner said.

Marriner said the coast guard vessel Aegir encountered the Rainbow Warrior about 80 kilometres off the Icelandic coast and put four men aboard the 48-metre-long converted trawler, which Greenpeace uses in its campaign to stop whale hunting and save the mammals from extinction.

Iceland, which takes much of its living from the sea, claims 200-mile offshore fishing and other economic rights.

The Icelanders first asked the Rainbow Warrior to stop hindering the whaler, Marriner said, then ordered the boat to head for Reykjavik, the island country's capital. When Rainbow Warrior skipper John Castle refused, he was arrested and the boat taken under tow, Marriner reported.

The anti-whaling campaign leader, Pete Wilkinson of Britain, made the trip to Reykjavik on board the coast guard ship, Greenpeace European director Art van Remundt said in Amsterdam.

Wilkinson's lawyer in Reykjavik, Hordur Olaffson, was not allowed to communicate via radio telephone with his client or crew members aboard the Rainbow Warrior, van Remundt said.

"As this constitutes a breach of the European Convention on Human Rights a protest has been sent to the Icelandic Minister of Justice Steingrinur Hermannson," he added.

Marriner said an Icelandic court last June issued an injunction ordering Greenpeace officers to cease harassing the Icelandic whaling fleet.

Somoza 'just visiting' in Paraguayan capital

ASUNCION (AP) — Ousted Nicaraguan strongman Anastasio Somoza and his family arrived in Paraguay and have been granted temporary residence visas, a Paraguayan official said today.

Somoza, who fled Nicaragua last month, arrived in Asuncion, Paraguay's capital, on Sunday aboard a Paraguayan jetliner from Guatemala, the newspaper Hoy reported.

Augusto Sabino Montanaro, Paraguayan interior minister, confirmed Somoza's arrival and said Somoza is in the country not as an exile but as a temporary resident. The 90-day temporary residence visas are renewable.

"I'm paying a visit, taking advantage of the traditional hospitality of the Paraguayan government and, logically, I can't make any statements except to express my thanks for having been received in this land," Hoy quoted Somoza as saying.

"If it is authorized I will hold a press conference in a few days to give more details concerning my presence in this country."

The newspaper said Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner, who celebrated his 25th anniversary in power last Wednesday, visited Somoza on Sunday night in the luxurious house on the outskirts of Asuncion.

Paraguay has not recognized the five-member junta appointed to govern Nicaragua by the Sandinista National Liberation Front, which defeated Somoza's government July 18 after a bloody civil war.

Aside from Nicaragua, Paraguay was the only member of the Organization of American States to cast a no vote when the OAS called on Somoza to resign last June, after the Sandinistas had begun their final offensive. The United States supported the resolution.

After resigning the Nicaraguan presidency, Somoza first went to Florida, where he owns a luxurious estate in the Miami Beach area. He left within a few days, however, after U.S. officials accused his handpicked interim successor of going back on an agreement to hand over power to the junta promptly. The junta took power later the same week, and its officials said they would seek Somoza's extradition.

Paraguay has served as a place of exile for a number of Latin American political figures, including the late Argentine dictator Juan Peron, former Brazilian president Joao Goulart and former Bolivian president Victor Paz Estenssoro.

Stroessner, a 67-year-old army general, has ruled Paraguay through control of the armed forces and the Colorado party since seizing power in a May, 1954, military coup. He was elected president two months later and re-elected every five years starting in 1958.

Brain cell grafting technique developed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors in future may be able to replace destroyed brain cell with healthy cells in an operation much like skin grafting.

Researchers at Saint Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D.C., the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Denver and the Karolinska Institute in Sweden have been able to supplant damaged nerve cells with healthy ones in the brains of laboratory rats.

The grafted nerve cells — neurons — have survived and grown. Motor abnormalities caused by the initial nerve cell destruction were reduced after the brain tissue grafting.

The researchers, reporting in Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, speculate that brain tissue grafting eventually may be used in human to treat neurological disorders, such as Parkinson's disease.

Plant tree now for Christmas

This last week of August is just right for thinking about a living Christmas tree. The idea may have occurred at a previous festive season as being a good investment but it was then too late to do anything about it.

You may want to plant the tree permanently outdoors when you buy it and use it in that position, sparsely decorated with Christmas lights.

It is for this purpose that we will deal with the subject now. Container-grown trees, set on balconies and decks, can be considered later in the season.

From the inside looking out to what may seem like the most suitable spot, first try to imagine the five- to eight-foot lighted Christmas tree. Then go out with a stake (the longest you can find) and set it upright at the selected spot; back into the house to view the picture. Remember all the time you are viewing a dark green Christmas tree, not a thin stake.

Now go around that part of the garden to figure how an evergree tree when it reaches 12 feet or so will affect other plants and other views.

Go to the boundaries of your property to see how the growing tree will improve or inhibit views.

This game may take the best part of a week; for each family member and even the near neighbors should be given the chance to express an opinion and make suggestions. Consider all ideas, even the craziest, for that just might be the best idea of all when adjusted to realities.

If the planting of a large tree is not possible for your garden, a dwarf specimen of the same genus may be the answer.

The well-known Scot's pine (Pinus sylvestris) is a fast-growing tall tree, but there is a dwarf form which may fit into some situations where an almost horizontal shape will be effective.

Even tall kinds may be kept compact by controlling the young "candle" growths in spring. The dark green needles of Scot's pine are in clusters of two, and are three inches long. They produce a dense growth when controlled, or an elegant shapely tree when the tall Pinus sylvestris is grown naturally.

Another pine suitable for these Christmas tree displays, as well as being beautiful all year, is the Mountain pine, Pinus mugo for a tall form, Pinus mugo mughus for a dwarf stocky plant.

While there is time, think about this idea, then go to one or two nurseries where you can see the trees either growing in rows or growing in containrs.

Be sure to get the full correct botanical name of what you order or buy, and some idea from the nurseryman as to the ultimate height since your Christmas tree is intended to be part of your permanent garden plan.

As you think about all this, you find it becomes something more than just a passing whim for Christmas decorating; your tree will become living beauty for your garden and home for all time. Its influence will, if a large kind is selected, even extend to the neighborhood and be seen from afar if allowed to grow naturally.

Tad unhurt in plunge

PORTLAND (AP) — A four-year-old Seattle boy apparently escaped serious injury Sunday when he fell from a fourth-floor motel balcony into a mound of bark dust in a shrub bed.

Authorities said Randy Cho dropped safely past two lower-floor balconies and projecting supports on the ground floor, then narrowly missed a parked car in the fall at the motel.

Spy business truly trashy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Soviet embassy here and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency use the same garbage dump to get rid of unwanted pieces of paper.

And American spy-watchers regularly sift through it to see what the Russians have been up to.

The top intelligence finds so far — restaurant bills and unpaid parking tickets discarded by the Russians, said Bob Johnson, manager of the Stump Dump in Great Falls, Va., about 16 kilometres from the United States capital.

The Soviet rubbish, delivered by two Russians in a white truck, is examined by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which is responsible for foreign intelligence and counter-intelligence operations in the U.S.

"The FBI learns all kinds of stuff from it — like when the Russians have been to Rive Gauche (a celebrated French restaurant in Washington) and who they've had dinner with," Johnson said in an interview with the newspaper Washington Post.

"The parking tickets tell them where the Russians have been," he added.

The Russians usually pay the dump's fee in cash, but sometimes they hand over bottles of vodka instead, Johnson said.

Besides the Russians, the Stump Dump also takes rubbish from various other foreign embassies as well as the CIA, the Pentagon, and other U.S. government agencies.

The CIA is cautious about the waste paper it sends to the dump. CIA paper is shredded, chemically treated to obliterate print, ground, compacted and then delivered in boxes.

"The CIA comes out every so often to see if anyone is looking at them," Johnson said.

UIC takes big bite from federal purse

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal spending deficit for the first quarter of the current fiscal year was $5.62 billion, Finance Minister John Crosbie said today.

This is 26 per cent higher than the $4.45-billion deficit recorded for the same three-month period in 1978.

Monthly spending figures released by the finance department show that spending by the end of June had reached $13.02 billion and revenues were $7.4 billion.

Corresponding statistics for the same period last year were $11.57 billion in expenditures and $7.12 billion in revenues.

— Unemployment insurance, $2.4 billion.

— Interest payments on the public debt, $2.1 billion.

— Old-age payments, $1.5 billion.

— Defence, $895 million.

— Equalization payments to the provinces, $783 million.

— Hospitalization payments, $610 million.

On the revenue side, 39 per cent, or $2.86 billion was personal income tax payments, 16 per cent, or $1.18 billion was corporation taxes, 28 per cent, or $2.1 billion was excise taxes and duties and the remainder was return on government investments, interest on bank deposits, postal revenue and other smaller items.

During June alone, a $1.33-billion deficit was recorded. This compared with $1.26 billion for the same month last year.

In his state-of-the-economy statement last month, Crosbie predicted the year-end government deficit would be $11.3 billion, down slightly from the $11.7 billion chalked up last year by the Liberal government.

Most spending during the first quarter of this fiscal year, which began April 1, was beyond the control of the Conservative government. Crosbie was not sworn in as finance minister until June 4.

He told reporters July 26 that he hopes to keep government spending within the $52.6-billion ceiling set by his Liberal predecessor Jean Chretien, but recent oil price increases would force him to chop some planned spending to meet this target.

While the summer's sharp increase in world oil prices has forced the government to channel more tax dollars into subsidies for eastern consumers, it has also allowed the government to collect more in corporate taxes than it had anticpated from western oil companies.

The net effect of these two influences, Crosbie said, was that his government was able to reduce the estimated year-end deficit to $11.3 billion, from the $12.9 billion in Chretien's November budget.

Glum forecast wrong: Begbie

TORONTO (CP) — Despite gloomy predictions for Canada's economic future in last week's Conference Board forecast, some economic forecasters are optimistic.

"I'm looking for a higher growth rate than the Conference Board's," said Carl Beigie, head of the C. D. Howe Research Institute of Montreal. "I think that so many of these forecasts based on models are pretty inaccurate and very often wrong."

The Conference Board said real economic growth will drop from this year's expected 3.3 per cent to 1.5 per cent in 1980.

"They base their projections too often on the latest quarter. For instance, I'm sure that the Conference Board overlooked the big drop in the jobless rate that has just been announced."

Beigie says the jobless figures which showed unemployment down to its lowest level in three years at 7.2 per cent of the labor force "shows an underlying strength in the Canadian economy" that many forecasters have failed to take into account.

"If it weren't for the U.S. recession, 1980 would have shaped up to be an excellent year for Canada. However, I expect the slowdown in the U.S. economy to be over by the last quarter of this year and look for a strong upturn in both Canada and the U.S. by next spring."

Train station tears as Dief wends west

Times News Services

On railway platforms throughout the Ottawa Valley and into northern Ontario, groups of John Diefenbaker's fellow Canadians waved adieu Sunday as the former prime minister's funeral train passed by on its 3,000-kilometre journey to Saskatoon.

In the mining city of Sudbury, 450 kilometres northwest of Ottawa, more than 1,500 persons lined up at midnight to catch a glimpse of Diefenbaker's closed coffin.

During a five-minute whistle-stop at Chalk River, Ont., beginning at 7:45 p.m. EDT, 13-year-old Nancy Klock of Deep River bawled unashamedly amid a crowd of about 50 persons.

The journey began at 5:15 p.m. from Ottawa station following a state funeral for the former Progressive Conservative leader.

The train stopped today in Winnipeg and Tuesday is scheduled to stop at the Saskatchewan towns of Melville, Watrous, Chappel Junction and Prince Albert before arriving in Saskatoon.

The prairie politician will be buried Wednesday along the banks of the South Saskatchewan River.

The hearse that carried the former Progressive Conservative leader's body and more than 30 limousines had made a final trip through the rain-soaked streets of Ottawa to the station after an hour-long interfaith service at Christ Church Cathedral.

More than 1,200 invited dignitaries, government officials and Diefenbaker friends crowded into the Anglican church to hear the former prime minister eulogized as a man of integrity, honesty, honor and sensitivity by Rev. Ralph Cummings, minister of First Baptist Church here.

The service — attended by Governor-General Ed Schreyer, his wife, Lily, Prime Minister Joe Clark and his wife, Maureen McTeer, and Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau — followed a colorful procession from nearby Parliament Hill, where Diefenbaker's body had been lying in state since Friday.

More than 23,000 of Diefenbaker's fellow Canadians, a few weeping openly, had filed by the open coffin to pay their last respects.

In Toronto today, it was reported that Diefenbaker had a secret trust fund from the Progressive Conservative party of about $500,000 which is disbursed in his will.

The Toronto Star said the fund was set up for Diefenbaker in 1963 for his retirement. He did not use any of it during his lifetime, but was concerned that the money might end up back in party coffers if he did not make provisions for it in his will.

The newspaper says he has willed one-third of the fund to a project in his home town of Prince Albert, Sask., one-third to the Diefenbaker museum in Saskatoon and one-third for the distribution of his books and writings to schoolchildren.

Beef price expected to jump

TORONTO (CP) — Beef bargains are over and prices could rise an average of five cents a pound next week, an industry spokesman says.

"It's normal to expect some price advance," said Charles Gracey, manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, in noting higher prices being paid to beef producers in Canada and the U.S.

He said wholesale prices paid to U.S. cattle raisers — the beef price trendsetters — had recovered to about $64 a hundredweight last week. The prices had fallen earlier to $59 from $72 a hundredweight. In Canada, the prices dropped to $70 from $85, but then rose to $76 a hundredweight.

And now! Attack of the monster snails. . .

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Giant African snails are causing havoc in the Indian islands of Andaman and Nicobar, north of Indonesia.

The several million snails now on the islands are destroying fruit trees, vegetables and even coffee and rubber plantations. And the situation could worsen: A single snail can lay 1,000 eggs in its lifespan.

The snails were introduced into the islands during the Second World War, when the snail-eating Japanese occupied Andaman and Nicobar.

Various methods have been tried to exterminate the snails, all unsuccessful.

The local Agricultural Research Institute is investigating the possibility of exporting the snails — sending some of them back to Japan as a cash export.

"The French and the Germans love snail meat and so do the Japanese," says institute director T. R. Dutta.

Meanwhile, efforts to wipe out the giant snails continue. Snail-eating crabs have been used without much success.

A special breed of ducks is being brought into service.

Bottle sellers risking fines

Retailers caught selling banned 1.5-litre bottles of pop are risking heavy fines or jail, says federal Consumer Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence.

"If storekeepers are selling them with the knowledge that they have been banned, then we shouldn't have any mercy on them," Lawrence said Sunday. "The instructions (to consumer affairs inspectors) are that they are to be prosecuted."

By midday today, however, Bill White, regional manager of the department's product safety branch in B.C., had received no instructions from Ottawa to step up activities against offenders.

White said his branch has been working quietly with local bottlers, and two of the three main bottlers using the large bottles were asked to stop producing them prior to the ban becoming law.

White isn't certain yet how effective the recall has been.

Charges for selling the bottles, banned Friday, would be laid under the Hazardous Products Act and could result in a fine up to $1,000, six months in prison, or both.

The ban has resulted in a hasty search for safer packaging methods.

Coca-Cola Ltd. has developed a plastic ring that slips around its bottles and absorbs the shock so the bottle will not explode when tipped.

Cold war won by Israeli?

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israeli scientists have invented a machine which they say clears a common cold within one day.

But they admit they are not sure why the device, based on earlier theories of heat treatment, works.

Developed by Dr. Arnon Yurushalmi of the Weizman Institute of Science at Rehovot, the small machine is fed with distilled water and then delivers humid air to the patient's nostrils at a steady rate, maintaining a constant temperature of 44 degrees Celsius.

Dr. Dov Opher of the state-run Kaplan Hospital said Sunday he had treated hundreds of patients with a prototype machine and has found that one 30-minute treatment usually clears up a common cold within one day.

But he added that the cold virus was not killed and the reasons for the success of the treatment are not yet clear.

Neither of them speak English and Thi Lien was already pregnant. They had two children.

They were part of a group of 34 refugees who came to Victoria during the spring months. All of them now have jobs and homes.

Sponsor, John McGee said today he had his car car ready to take Mrs. Phan to the hospital since the first week of August.

On Saturday he drove her to the hospital at 6 a.m..

Mrs. McGee says Thi Lien is "just a wee doll of a woman" but at nine a.m., Saturday, she gave birth to a bouncing eight pound, six ounce boy.

The baby, Huy Van, is the first baby to be born in Victoria to Vietnamese refugees who were forced to flee their country.

Both mother and child are reported doing well.

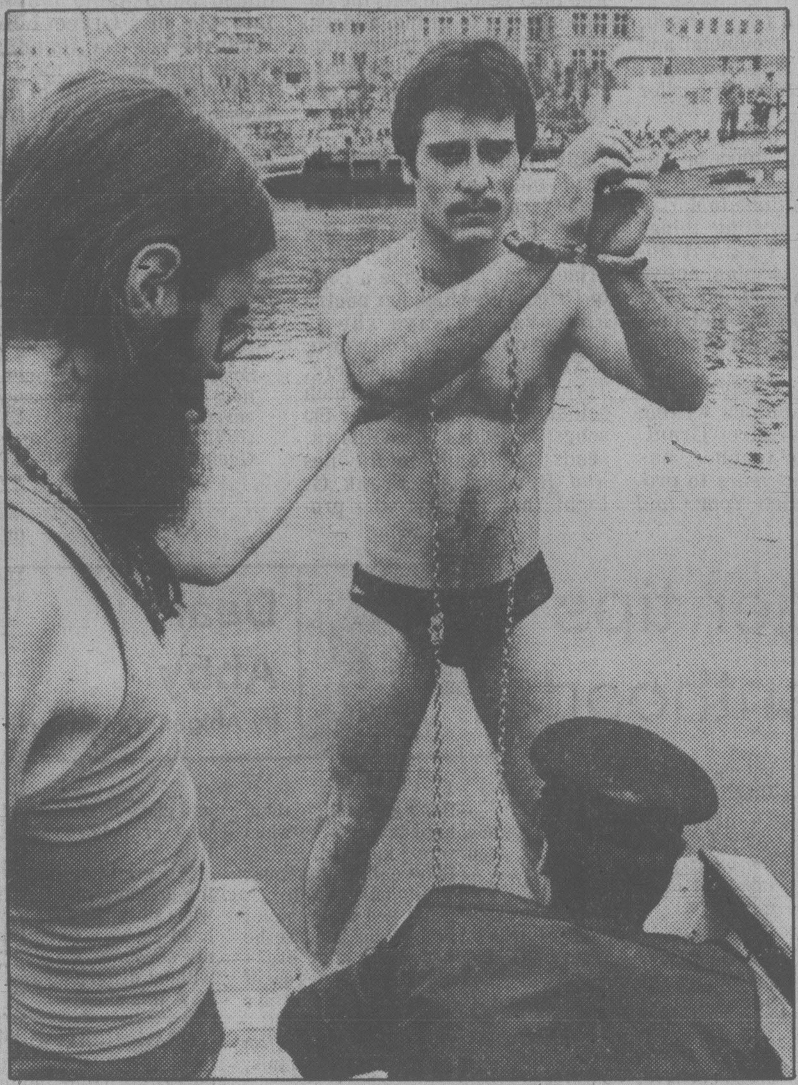
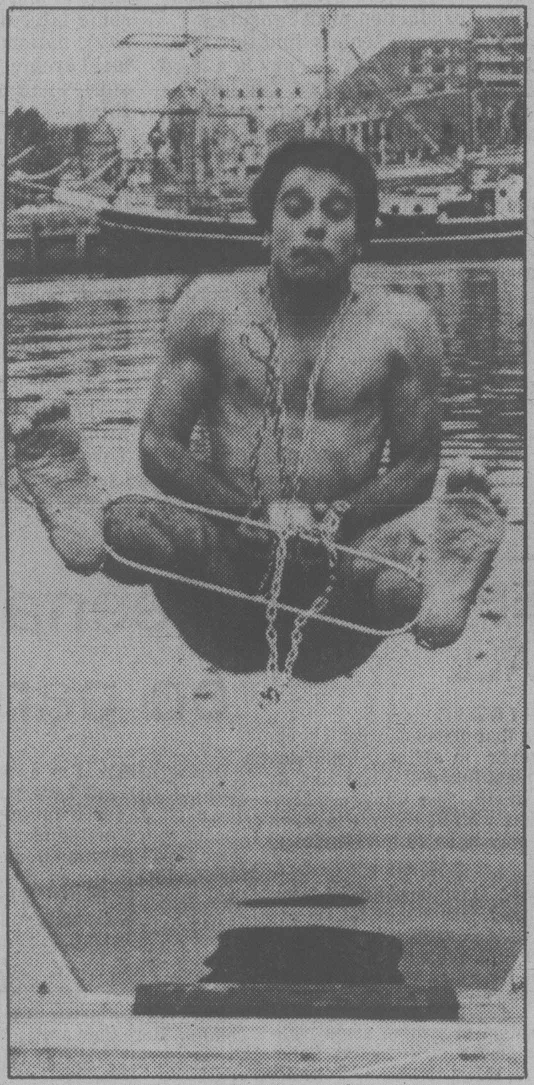
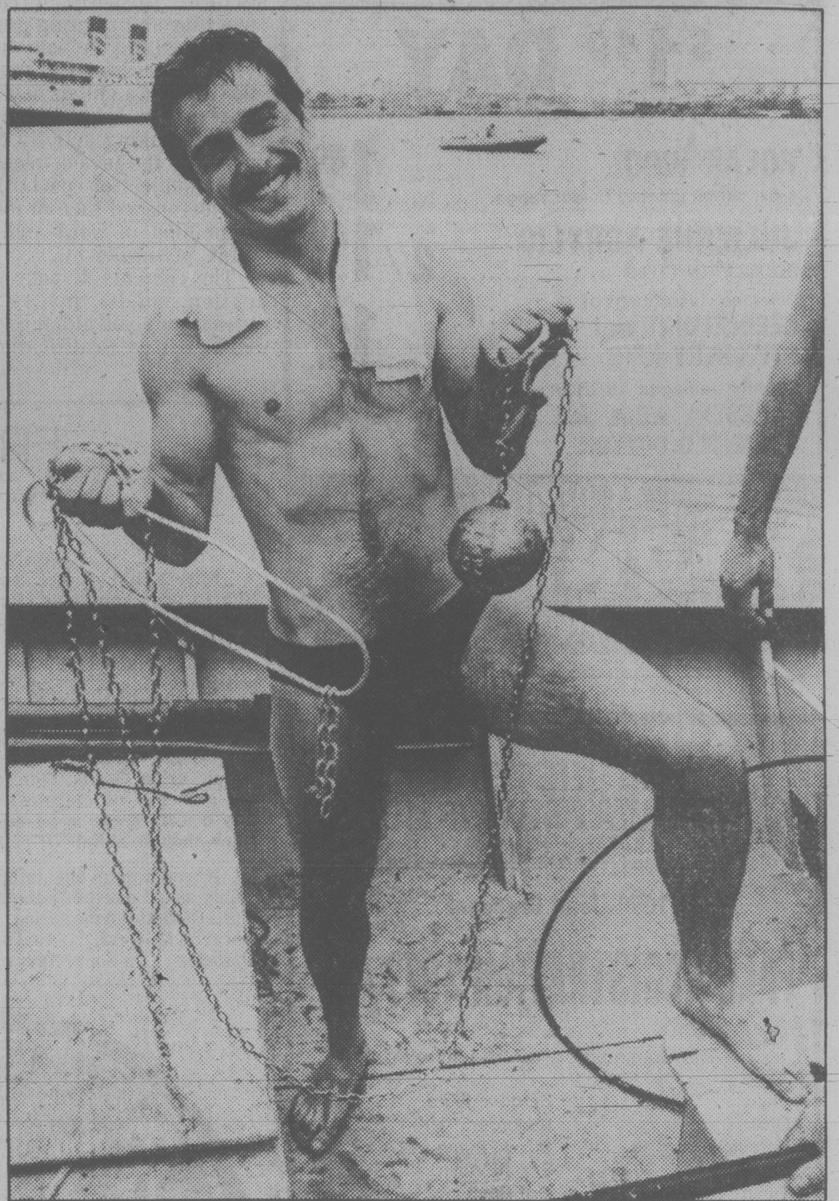
In a bind . . . but not for long







CHAIN REACTION: Saturday was overcast and rainy but nobody got wetter than escape artist Lee Shilo of Victoria. Last April Shilo, a modern-day Harry Houdini, jumped off the Johnson Street bridge and escaped underwater from a straightjacket. Saturday he leaped into 23 feet of murky Inner Harbor water shackled by a 20-pound ball and chain. Victoria police constable Alan Barron, with an assist from Gene Burlock, makes sure the chains are secure (left photo) before Shilo goes overboard (centre photo). But 30 seconds later he surfaces (top right), free of his fetters. Helped back on board (bottom right), Shilo shrugs and smiles as if there were nothing to it. (John McKay photos).

Fog-shrouded ferry nearly runs aground

The ferry Bowen Queen came close to running aground halfway out of fog-shrouded Fulford Harbour this morning.

A passenger told the Times a grounding was averted when a hurried full-speed astern order was given.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman said only that the thick fog was to blame for the incident and that there was no damage to the ship.

The only other ferry affected by this morning's fog was the one between Brentwood and Mill Bay which has no radar and missed her first sailings. She was in service by mid-morning, however.

There was no interruption in service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen although there were delays of two to three hours because of the absence of the Queen of Alberni, laid up after running aground in Active Pass.

Salt Spring Island commuters for the 6:45 a.m. sailing from Fulford Harbour watched wide-eyed as the Bowen Queen's bow propeller churned and the water turned brown, an indication of how shallow the harbor is at that point and how close the ferry had come to running aground.

The excitement wasn't over with the near grounding, however. With visibility severely limited and the ferry's foghorn blowing regularly, the ferry turned into Gosse Channel, between Piers and Knapp islands just off Swartz Bay.

It was at that point that the red channel marker came into view, too late for evasive action. The ferry's port bow slammed into it. There was no apparent damage as the large buoy floated clear along the port side.

Controls on boat builders?

Saanich Ald. Sandy Noel wants council to establish controls over private boat building on residential property.

Backyard boat builders should be required to take out permits, Noel says in a letter to council.

Residents have complained their neighborhoods suffer from long-term boat building projects, he says.

"It is not suggested that the municipality inhibit the enthusiasm of private boat or yacht building but that some measure of control be instituted to protect neighbors from what may develop into a five- or six-year program," the letter states.

Noel suggests permits be issued at little or no cost by the municipal inspection department before an outdoor boat-building program starts.

Police-fire move urged in Saanich

A space shortage facing Saanich fire and police departments won't be solved by a $250,000 addition to the existing complex, says municipal administrator William Tremayne.

Tremayne is recommending both departments move into a nearby building now shared by Saanich, the Capital Region District and the provincial health ministry.

The health ministry's lease expires in September and will not be renewed by the provincial government.

If the police board agrees the move is a good idea, the municipality could start discussions with the CRD, Tremayne suggests in a letter to council.

A preliminary cost estimate indicates expansion of the police-fire complex would cost at least $250,000.

But any such addition would provide only for the present needs of the fire department and is inadequate for the police department.

At Tremayne's request, the police and fire chiefs have just completed reports on their needs projected to the year 2000 and based on a Saanich population of 120,000.

Fire Chief Art Fryer believes the space now occupied by the health and welfare department plus several rooms used by the CRD would take care of expansion needs for the department.

Moving equipment and minor alterations would cost between $5,000 and $7,000, he estimates.

Police Chief Bob Peterson told Tremayne in his report that moving into the health building is only a partial solution to his space problems.

Only portions of the department could be moved there and it is a better idea to keep the entire police operation under one roof, he said.

However, Tremayne points out that the police department needs 6,738 square feet of space right now and the health and welfare building could provide more than 7,000 square feet of space on one floor.

Firemen injured in crash

Two Victoria firemen were among three people injured when an emergency car crashed responding to what turned out to be a malfunctioning alarm Sunday morning.

Police said a station wagon driven north on Wharf by fireman Robert W. Young, 30, was in collision with a car driven east on Johnson by Ellen M. Griffin, 73, of 713 Cairn.

Young and acting assistant chief Daniel O'Connell, 52, a passenger in the fire vehicle, were treated at Victoria General Hospital for bruises and neck injuries, and Griffin for face cuts.

The fire department said the station wagon had slowed and stopped in the intersection with siren sounding and the other driver mistook it for the lift span warning on the nearby Johnson Street bridge.

Counselling for dropouts

The Greater Victoria School District today opened a temporary counselling service for teen-age dropouts who want to return to the classroom.

The advisory service for dropouts will be available until Thursday between 9 a.m. and noon, district counsellor Tom Hueston said.

Experienced counsellors will talk to former students on the telephone or set up personal interviews, he said.

The service — called Drop Back — is an administrative experiment to see if easing the transition from the outside world to the classroom will encourage more dropouts to return to school.

"Once your out, it's difficult to get back in. It's hard to get in the front door," Hueston said.

Assistant superintendent Court Brousson had to ask school board permission in May because the move meant a major change of policy.

But the administation wants to keep track of students who leave school early and offer them help if they decid to return to school.

Legally, the board has no control over the actions of dropouts over 16 years of age.

"That hasn't been discussed yet," he said.

Interested teen-agers should call 592-1211 if they wish to use the service.

Ask the Times

Q. Please tell me where I can write to the Greenpeace organization about the Save the Whales campaign? Also the comedian Gallagher? I know he is closely connected with the campaign. J.R.

A. The Greenpeace address is: Greenpeace Foundation, 207-1929 Douglas, Victoria. The phone number is 385-1011. If you write the National Broadcasting Company's public relations office at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, New York, U.S.A., 10020, they will give you the address of Gallagher's agent.

Q. I've been told chow dogs can have blue coats. Is it true? D.P.

A. Yes. The coats can be black, red, yellow, blue or white but coats should all be of one color to be purebred.

On the beach always something to do

NORTH BY OUR HOUSE, the beach is stony. But south a couple of hundred yards, the sands begin. Tawny and inviting on these warm summer days, they undulate down to a silken sea.

The sands constitute a separate world. Adults may bask and drowse like seals under the beneficent sun, but for the daily swarm of children, it's a busy world. There's always something doing, some project to be accomplished with infinite toil and limitless enthusiasm.

Year by year, new generations of children build sand castles. Often these are both imaginative and elaborate, with walls and towers, moats and once even an ingeniously-contrived portcullis that rose and descended at the twitch of a string.

They are studies in impermanence, these castles. The flooding tide invades them and they melt away. But while building them, the kids are completely absorbed and happy, given over to the magic of creation.

But sand castles are mostly for the small fry. Boys of a certain age and stage turn to raft-building as if in answer to some prompting of nature.

The beach is wonderfully kind to prospective raftmakers. It supplies drift logs in plenty, in a variety of sizes from small and skinny to large and seemingly immovable. The inexhaustible warehouse of the beach also dispenses scraps of planking in useful widths and lengths, poles with the bark conveniently abraded away, and even rusted nails that can be bashed free with a rock and painfully straightened.

It is a study in applied industry to watch a couple of boys building a raft.

It also sheds light on some of man's more impressive endeavors, such as the raising of Stonehenge and the construction of the pyramids.

A pair of raft-intent boys will tackle the impossible without a second thought. And frequently, they bring it to pass. Shouts of triumph as that "seemingly immovable" log is levered with labor infinite from its nest and rolled into the sea!

Rafts tend to be safe. Their very shakiness condemns their riders to reasonably shallow waters. Not so the air mattresses and truck inner tubes on which some children go to sea.

These engender boldness. They tempt non-swimmers too far off shore, into an area of outward-setting currents which run with treacherous strength.

Last time Win and I went salmon fishing, we happened on two kids afloat on air mattresses well out beyond the kelp beds.

"Want us to tow you in?" I called.

The near mattress-rider shook his head. Then, as if to reassure us, he hollered back, "We can swim."

Still, we kept the two in sight, and were relieved when they paddled back inside the sheltering kelp.

Most children need only to be exposed to a beach to occupy themselves happily with its infinite diversity. But at rare intervals, an exception to the rule turns up.

We were strolling the sands on a blistering day a week or two ago when we came on a little boy sitting on a drift log. He was sifting sand with his toes, and on his face was a settled frown.

His mother called to him from where she nested with beach towel and sun-glasses among the upper logs:

"Why don't you go and play?"

His answer, which we found pathetic:

"Aw, there's nothing to do."

Perhaps the child was so citified that he could only regard a stretch of untrammelled beach as a bore. Or perhaps he was merely one of those unfortunately dull children who grow into stuffy adults.

Toronto

The Toronto Stock Exchange said shares of Block Brothers Industries Ltd. will be removed from the trading list at the close Wednesday at the company's request following a one-for-1,000 consolidation of its stock.

New York

The stock market gained ground today as surging oil issues offset declines based on worries about the possibility of further interest rate increases.

Leading the increase were oil issues, which continued to draw strength from favorable earnings pictures and also got momentum from President Carter's decontrol of so-called "heavy" crude oil last Friday.

The strength in those issues countered fears that further increases in interest rates may be in the offing. Last week, the prime lending rate rose to a record-tying 12 per cent, and many experts believe it is headed higher.

London

The Financial Times index was down 9.9 to 464.3.

Industrials, oils, banks and gold declined.

Canadian stocks were also lower.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE was a gamble of a different sort for the early pioneers of North American industrialization. This 125-year-old flywheel from a 45-ton Gothic Beam Engine was recently moved to Greenfield Village, an historic complex in Michigan founded by Henry Ford. In early 19th century, machines such as this began the process of industrialization in North America.
